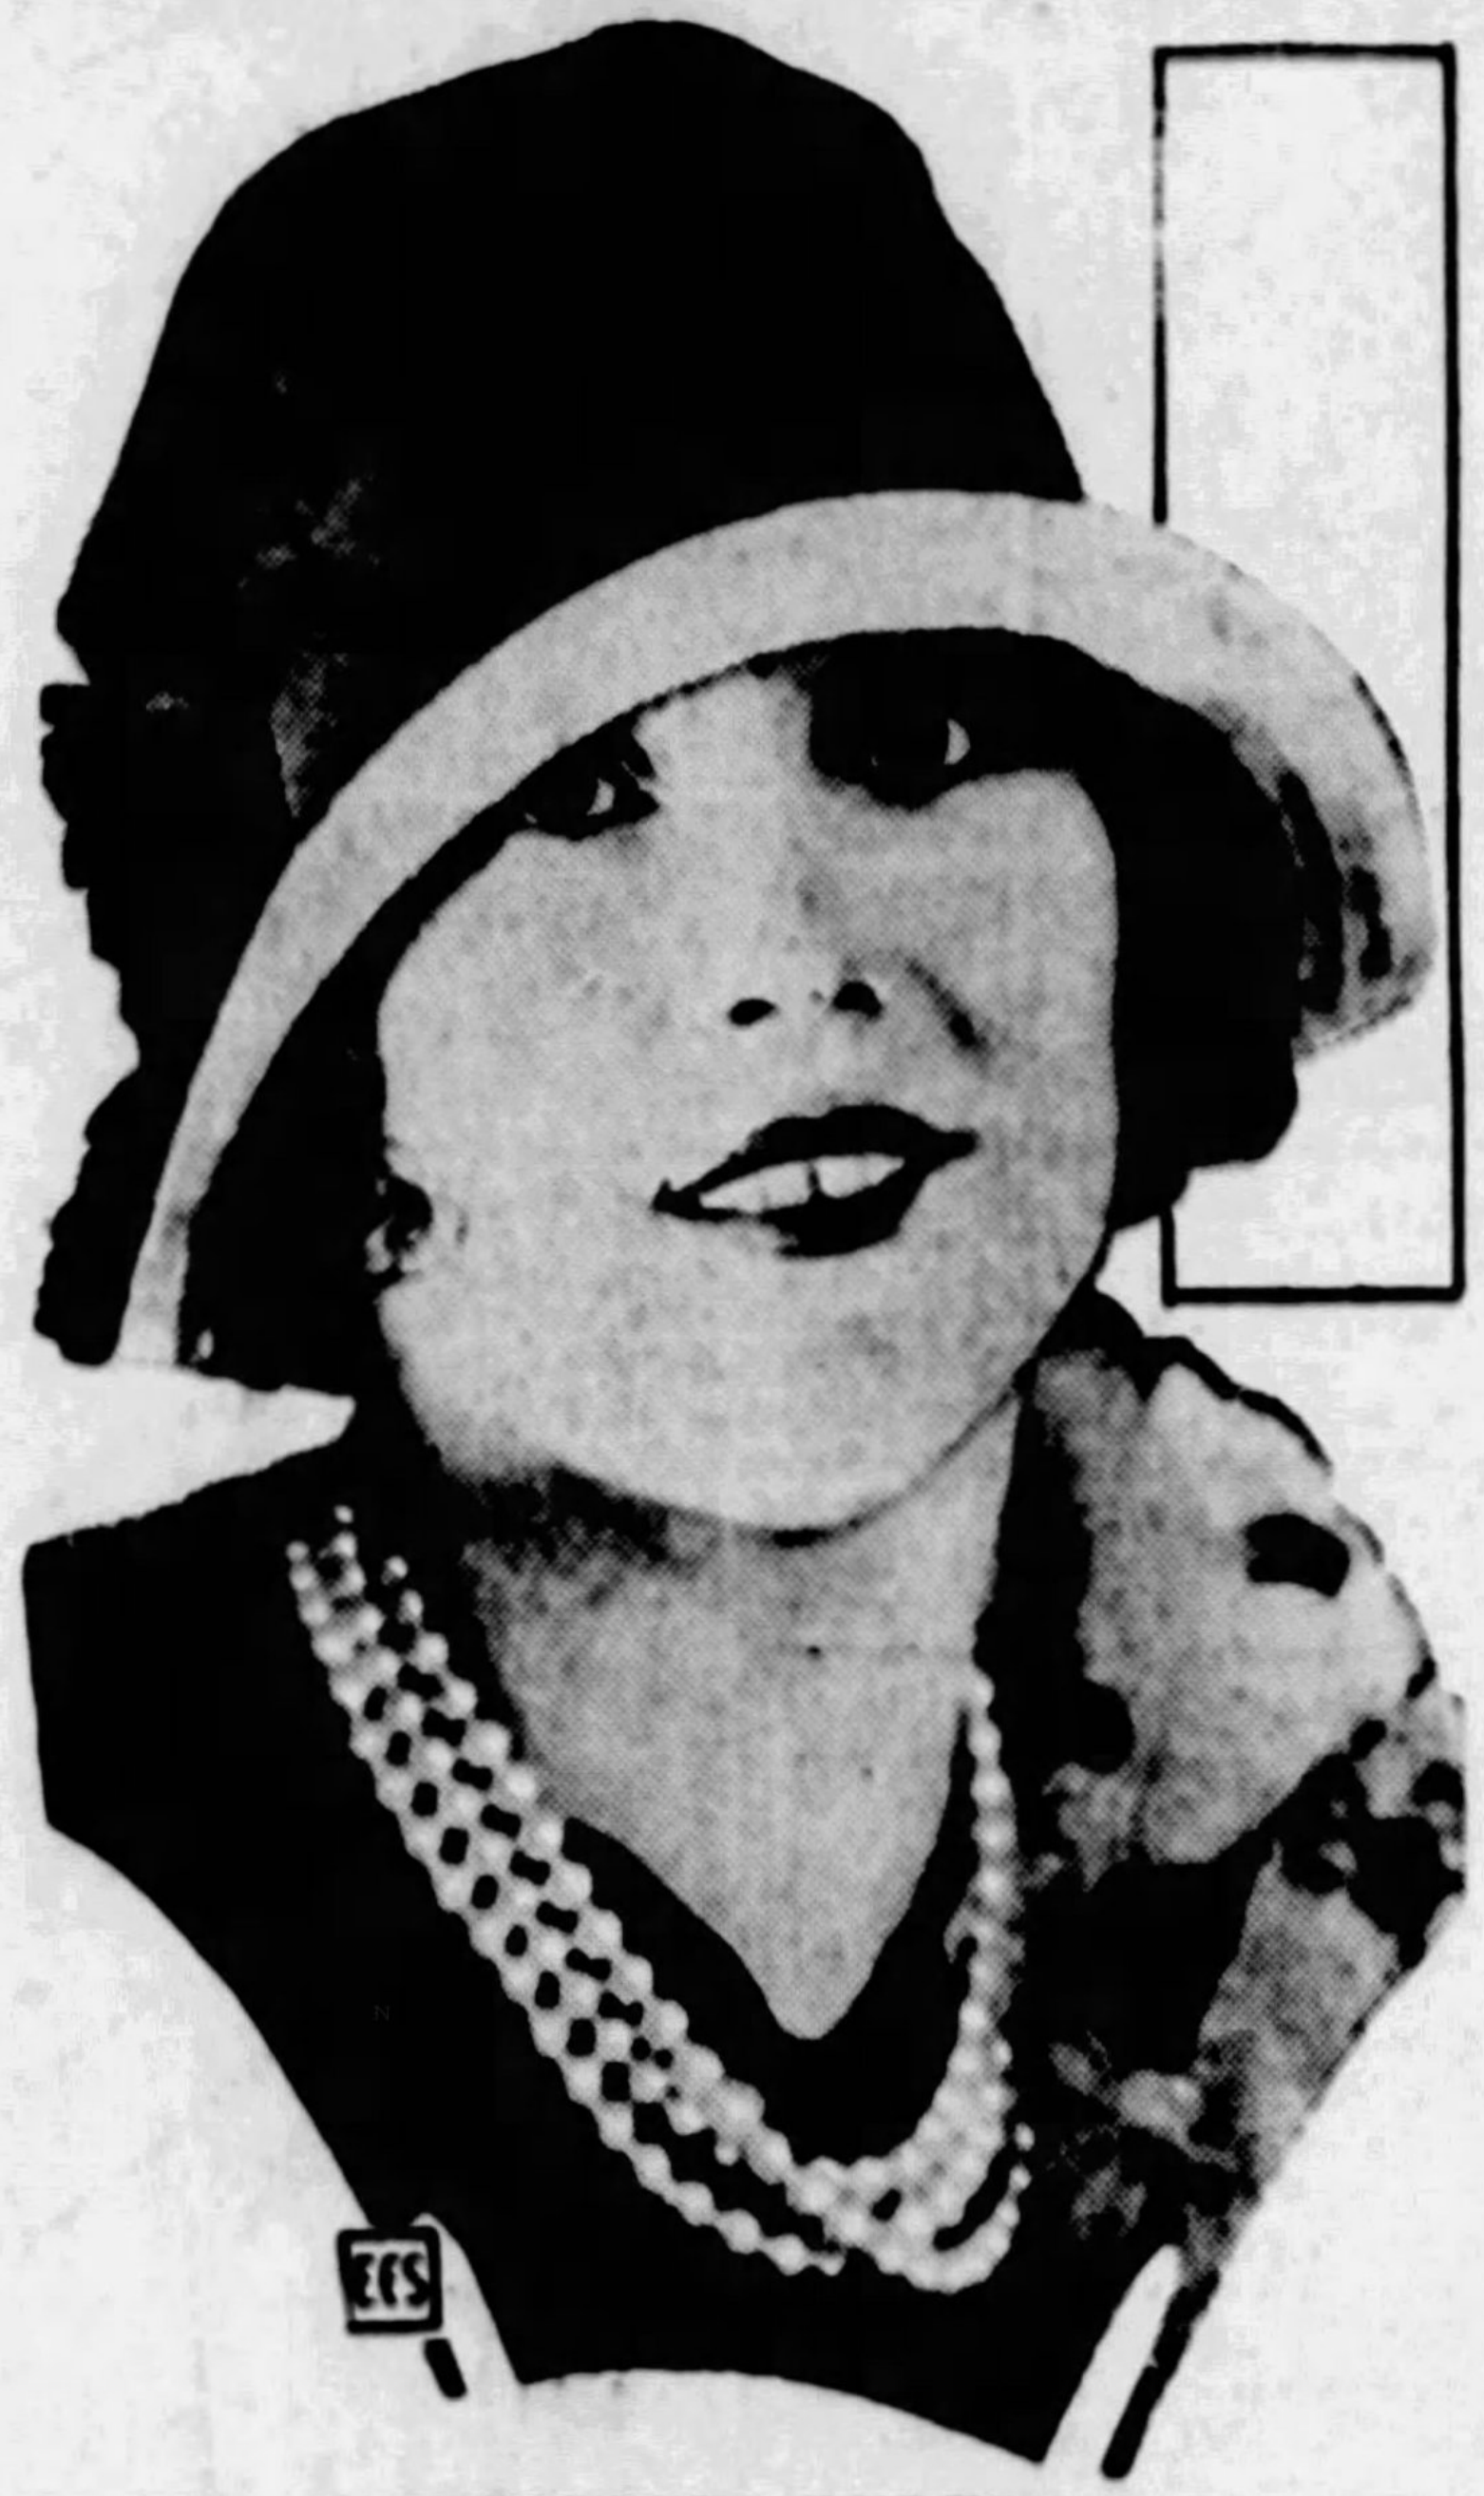
SALLY'S SHOULDERS



BEATRICE BURTON

Having recovered from an illness, Miss Beatrice Burton, noted serial novelist, has turned her attention to a new group of characters easily recognizable in American life. She has discovered for you an unusual yarn in "Sally's Shoulders."

"Sally's Shoulders" Are Different; Watch 'Em

MR. JEROME, father, returned home to die—but didn't.

Sally Jerome, young daughter, sweet and gay, danced her way through life, despite the burdens ill-becoming a pretty 20-year-old.

Mrs. Jerome, her mother, was an invalid.

Millie Jerome, her older sister, was selfish, lazy, pretty but—

"Beau" Jerome, was a laggard brother, Millie's twin.

Mrs. Peevey was the crabbed old employer of Sally.

Ted Sloan was an indefinite type young man.

Mabel Wilmot was "Beau's" betrothed.

Jack Nye was handsome and . . .?

Beatrice Burton, presenting her latest serial novel, "Sally's Shoulders," has chosen the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph as her vehicle to introduce to the readers of Pittsburgh. The first chapter begins next Monday.

Will the characters named above be friends? Well, some of them will be. Some of them will not.

But with that strange mirror that so individually belongs to Miss Burton, with that strange faculty she has of seeking out her characters from the common lanes of life and reflecting them and their lives onto the printed page, she will give her followers another but totally different group of people.

"Sally's Shoulders" will furnish a bright, interesting enthralling kaleidoscopic view of the great American family. It has humor; it has pathos. Its thread reaches mountain peaks at times, where the brave alone dare walk. Again, on the bottom of life, the lesser men and women will parade their virtues and passions. For life is like that. And Miss Burton sees life and translates it.

Miss Burton has written numerous novels, many of them serialized. But with "Sally's Shoulders" there goes this—it is distinctive. It is different from any of her previous tales. And yet, basically, it holds all the glamour, mischief, ideals, common sense and foolishness that so paradoxically mean youth.

Love has its place. Once having found Sally, and having seen her "perfect shoulders" carry the weight of her world, there could be no story without love, because Sally and Love are almost interchangeable.

"Sally's Shoulders" begins next Monday in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. It is a real story. You will meet yourself perhaps in its pages. Or, looking into the mirror of life, you will meet old friends.

Watch for the first chapter, read it, and you will want to go on with the story.

Beatrice Burton Knows the Great American Home-- and what goes on in it.

If you would know, read "Sally's Shoulders," which begins next Monday

GEN. WOOD MOURNED BY NATION

By JOHN T. LAMBERT,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 8.—President Coolidge is expected to appoint a civil governor of the Philippine Islands to succeed the late Maj. Gen. Leonard A. Wood. He is anxious to strip the islands of the appearance of military government which grew up under Gen. Wood's administration and which provoked so much trouble between the general and the islanders.

President Coolidge was stunned by the news of Gen. Wood's death. It was given to him by Secretary Sanders shortly before the President left the game lodge for the Sunday religious services in the tiny frame church at Hermosa, and it threw a shadow over the day.

Gen. Wood was obviously in very ill health when he came here last month to report his administration to President Coolidge. He was helped from his special car at Custer, and his attendants practically lifted him into the President's auto for the trip to the game lodge. A paralysis

Searles, Methuen multimillionaire, died suddenly last night at the Searles mansion at Windham, N. H. He was stricken with an attack of indigestion and death came two hours later.

HARRISBURG CAPITOL IS WATCHED CLOSELY

BULLETIN

Supt. of Police Peter P. Walsh sent a detail of 12 clothesmen to the Henry W. Oliver building this afternoon to guard that structure, against demonstrations in behalf of Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti.

According to Supt. Walsh some of the officials of the Oliver building had requested the guard, but gave no explanation of what had suggested the need for it. The guards will patrol the sidewalks in front of the building.

Strikes of the Colorado coal miners and Paris taxi drivers, the decision of a wealthy Boston man to go to jail rather than pay a fine for inciting to riot, and the receipt of anonymous letters threatening to bomb New York skyscrapers, were new developments today in widespread protests against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Petitions by counsel for the condemned men for a writ of habeas corpus, a stay of execution and a writ of error were denied shortly after noon in Supreme Court at Boston.

The threatening letters received in New York, bearing only the typewritten signature "The anarchists of the world for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti," were turned over to Police Commissioner Warren. It was considered likely they were the work of cranks.

"The subway bombings," they said, "are only a sample of what will happen if our comrades are not set free." Further than that, there had still been no evidence uncovered to indicate that the subway bombings Friday night were perpetrated by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, although quest of a suspect took two detectives to Boston today.

New York police announced that a sedan driven by a man who appeared to be a foreigner and bearing Massachusetts license plates, was seen driving away from one of the wrecked subway stations. Police are in possession of the license number.

A general 24-hour protest strike declared in Paris was recognized by most of the taxi drivers, but otherwise conditions in the French capital were little affected, although there were several small-scale demonstrations in various parts of the city.

Edward Holton James, wealthy Boston radical, took a prison sentence of 90 days rather than pay a fine of $75 for inciting to riot and assaulting a policeman during a demonstration on Boston Common yesterday. He declined to plead and refused to rise

Sunday Sun-Tele Wins Popular Approval

A sell-out throughout Greater Pittsburgh greeted the first appearance of Pittsburgh's greatest Sunday newspaper, The Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph, the result of the merger of The Pittsburgh Sunday Gazette Times and The Pittsburgh Sunday Post.

Dealers trying to meet the unprecedented demand, kept an overworked circulation department constantly hurrying throughout the district with additional papers as fast as the presses could print them.

Practically the entire run of all editions of "The Sun-Tele" was sold, and this indication of the instant popularity of the new paper has resulted in extensive plans to print many more copies next Sunday, assuring plentiful supplies.

Favorable comment on the new paper was made by readers yesterday and today. The great number of excellent features, the method of handling the day's news, and the general make-up of "The Sun-Tele" assured its popularity with adults, while thousands of Pittsburgh youngsters rejoiced over 12 full pages of comic features.

Wild Rise In Cotton Market

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 8.—Prices on the New Orleans Cotton Exchange jumped 200 points or $10 a bale on the publication of the government cotton forecast today.

The rise was the most sensational the market has known in several years, swept all months to the full trading limit for the day. The forecast of 13,492,000 bales was 1,500,000 bales less than the trade had expected and when trading was resumed after the 15-minute recess following publication of the figures an immediate reversal of sentiment was shown and all months forged upward. The rise carried October from 16.81 to 18.84c and December from 17.17 to 19.10c.

3 INJURED IN WOOD ST. FIRE

Gaining rapid headway before it was discovered a downtown fire this morning resulted in three firemen being overcome by smoke, damaged the building at 305 Wood street about $30,000 and threatened to spread to nearby structures.

The injured are Robert G. Woodburn, 42, 3026 Allendale street, driver of squad wagon of No. 3 Engine Company; Frank Gorsek, 38, of Forty-fourth street, of No. 18 Engine Company, and James McManus, 45, of Penn avenue and Twenty-second street, of No. 18 Engine Company.

The blaze is believed to have started on a balcony in the rear of the four-story building at 305 Wood street, which is occupied by the H. J. Meyers Wholesale and Retail Tobacco Company. It ate its way up through the rear wall until it had reached the fourth floor. The flames had enveloped the entire rear part of the structure when M. J. Cronin, 1481 Park boulevard, Dormont, watchman, discovered the fire and sounded an alarm.

A second alarm was rung upon arrival of District Fire Chief Frank Loxterman.

FINE CUYLER $50; HE DIDN'T SLIDE

WHAT BOTH SIDES SAY:

"I did not slide because I figured I was a certain out and thought that by remaining on my feet I might provide enough interference to prevent a double play."

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

IT cost Kiki Cuyler $50 in American money to go into second base standing up in the fourth inning of the Pirates-Giants game at Forbes Field Saturday.

Ki was on first when P. Waner hit a grounder to Terry. Cuyler went romping to second and instead of hitting the dirt, as most well regulated ball players would have done, elected to retain his upright position. In the mixup, Jackson, Giants' shortstop, dropped the ball and Cuyler over-ran the bag. Travis recovered before Cuyler could get back and made the putout.

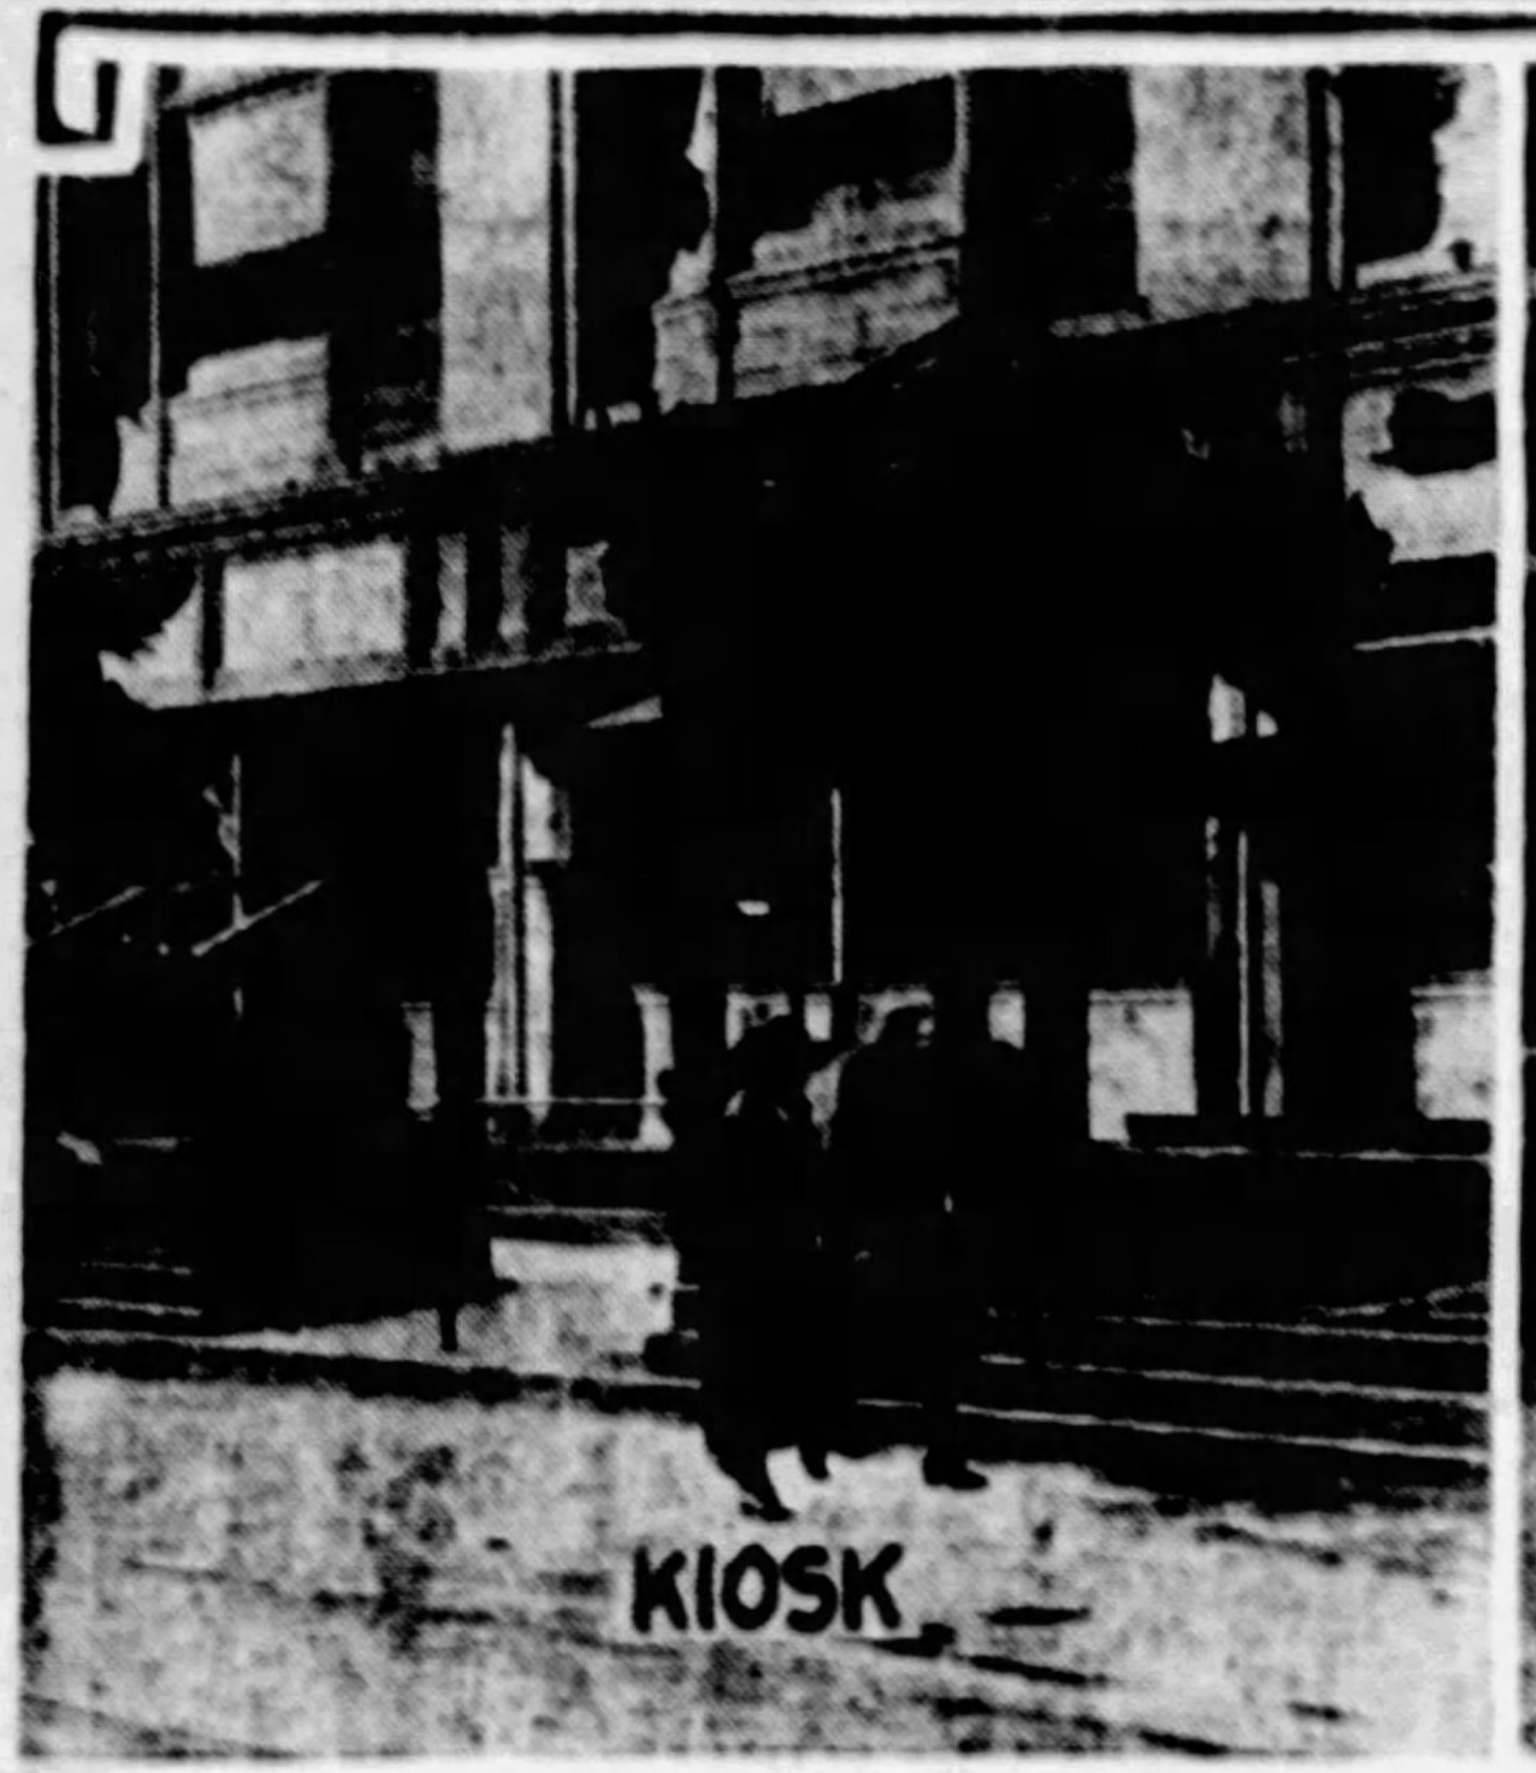
WORLD POLICE ON GUARD TO STEM SACCO RIOTS

BOMBS WRECK SUBWAY .: AND SHATTER CHURCH .: AS TERRORISM MOUNTS



DAMAGED

Infernal machines, believed set off by red Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, partially destroyed four New York subway stations. The photo shows the damaged kiosk at Twenty-eighth street and Fourth avenue, indicating by its shattered condition the force of the blast which took place below ground.

QUAKER CITY

In Philadelphia red sympathizers set off a bomb in the Emmanuel Presbyterian Church as a protest against the execution of the radicals. The church was partially wrecked by the explosion and buildings within a radius of four blocks were damaged. The view above shows the holes ripped in the wall of the church.

DEATH

An underground view of the New York subway where two bombs wrecked stations and caused the injury of 20 persons, one of whom was expected to die. Rapid transit lines were paralyzed until repairs were made. View shows the wrecked roof of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit station and debris.

TRAINS HALTED

SEARCHING

Scores of police and detectives, mobilized beforehand for the emergency, were rushed into the subways as the exploding infernal machines rocked buildings and their muffled roars echoed through basements. Here is a group searching for injured among the wreckage.

QUESTIONED

Morris Seigel, radical leader, was arrested and quizzed in the police investigation of the bombings. All radicals are being rounded up in the effort to trace responsibility for the deed. Seigel is shown under inquisition at Yorkville Court.

for the reading of the complaint, saying he would not stand up "before murderers."

State police were on duty today at the Pennsylvania State Capitol to guard against any attempt to bomb the buildings. The policemen were placed at all entrances to the Capitol at the orders of Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent.

BOMBING IN UTICA

In Utica, N. Y., two buildings in the Italian section of the city were wrecked by mysterious explosions. Both were unoccupied but several persons in adjoining buildings were slightly injured by flying glass. Police declared, however, that there was nothing to indicate that the blasts were the work of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

Still another protest to United States representatives abroad was received by the consul at Plymouth, England, from a group of Communists.

Throughout the country there were numerous arrests of red suspects, most of them being taken into custody as a result of distribution of alleged seditious literature.

In New York armored cars were added to the equipment of the completely mobilized police department.

In Montevideo, Uruguay, troops were to be held in armories prepared for disorders.

Although hoping for the best, officials are preparing for the worst and known radicals are under surveillance. John Krosko, an alleged "red," arrested yesterday in Preble avenue for firing a revolver, was fined $25 in Central Police Court today before Magistrate E. M. Hough who gave him the choice of 30 days in the workhouse.

A photostatic copy of the postal card mailed from Pittsburgh bearing the threat against Supreme Court officials is being sent here from Washington, Federal Prosecutor John D. Meyer was informed today.

Department of Justice men expect to use it in tracing the identity of the "red" who signed himself "E. J. K." in a threat against "the higher ups."

The card was mailed from the North Side postal station last week.

Returning, Mrs. Law told police, she left the automobile at Tunnel street and Wylie avenue, and swooned in the street. Police today arrested Mike Brunetti, 27, 725 Lockhart street, and Mike Juliano, 33, 6047 St. Marie street.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The little plot in Arlington Cemetery, set aside for the "Rough Riders" regiment of the Spanish-American War, tomorrow will receive the remains of the regiment's commander, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, who died early yesterday at Boston.

At the request of his widow, the distinguished soldier and late Governor-General of the Philippines will be laid at rest beside his comrades of the stirring days of '98.

The body, accompanied from Boston by Mrs. Wood and a military escort, will arrive in Washington early in the day and, following present plans, be taken at once to Arlington for the interment ceremonies.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 8.—A detail of six soldiers from Ft. Banks will accompany the body of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood to Washington late today on the Federal Express.

The squad, commanded by Capt. Roger Williams, marks the first of the military honors to be paid by the Army to the man who rose from the medical branch of the service to be one of its most distinguished leaders both in "the line" and in civil administration. At the station in Washington, the six will be increased to 1,500 as the War Department takes over the ceremonies.

As far as could be learned, no services will be held here prior to departure. Mrs. Wood was in seclusion at her hotel yesterday and today.

Gen. Wood had been operated upon for hernia last January and was believed never to have fully recovered his accustomed robustness. Death came early Sunday morning after another operation for recurrence of an old tumor ailment. He had been in the hospital only two days.

SYMPATHIZERS HERE .: DEMAND COURTS FREE .: SACCO AND VANZETTI

"PREJUDICE!"

"The whole trial was prejudice, prejudice, prejudice! They never had justice," cried Mrs. Sarah Limbach at Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting in the Moose Temple, Penn avenue, where 2,000 sympathizers of the condemned men gathered Sunday.

COMMITTEE

Here are the men who have been conducting the losing battle for the lives of Niccolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti in the Western Pennsylvania district. They constitute the defense committee for this section. Left to right: Front row—Drobetti Massimo, Louis Weissbart, Dr. William J. Van Essen, D. E. Earley and Powers Hapgood. Back row—A. J. Muste, Leonard Craig, Harry A. Goff and Louis Chuba. Dr. Van Essen is chairman of the committee.

"THEY MUST NOT DIE"

DENUNCIATION

This assemblage of 2,000 greeted with wild cheers the cry of their leaders that "Sacco and Vanzetti must not die." The trial of the two radicals was denounced as a "farce and a travesty on justice." Feeling ran high at the gathering and thunderous applause greeted the speakers, but police, on hand to keep order, had no trouble.

PLEADS

Appealing for justice, Powers Hapgood declares the radicals were tried in a period of post-war hysteria and were victims of overzeal on the part of the Department of Justice. Must the dignity of Massachusetts be upheld, he demanded, at the price of "innocent men's lives?"

DEATH CLOSES CAREER .·. OF GEN. LEONARD WOOD .·. SOLDIER AND STATESMAN

PREPAREDNESS

Gen. Wood advocated the training of youth for the defense of the nation, and it was largely through his efforts that citizen camps were established at Gettysburg and the Presidio, which later developed into the "Plattsburgh idea." Here he is shown as he looked in 1913, with his wife, at the Presidio.

WOUNDED

The general narrowly escaped death while on an inspection tour in France when a gun burst near him. He never commanded overseas, although he supervised training of the Eighty-ninth Division.

WOOD'S RISE TO FAME RIVALS FICTION

FOLLOWING is a sketch by Universal Service of the life of Maj.-Gen. Wood, whose brilliant career was ended by death Saturday night:

From an obscure young army surgeon, Leonard Wood shaped a career that made him famous as a constructive builder and administrator.

The late President Roosevelt said of him once:

"We had the same ideals and the same way of looking at life."

Because the two men had the same qualities of staunch Americanism Gen. Wood was conceded to have filled the place left by President Roosevelt in American life. He was among the presidential possibilities in 1920.

BORN IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Gen. Wood was born in Winchester, N. H., October 9, 1860. He was graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1884, and in the following year became an Army surgeon.

When the World War began, he was in command of the Eastern Department of the Army, with headquarters at Governors Island, New York. In the four years prior to then he had been chief of staff of the United States Army.

His first taste of war was in 1886, when he served in the campaign against Geronimo and his Apaches in the southwest. For his conduct in this campaign he was awarded a Medal of Honor.

In 1891 he was commended for gallant and hazardous service in commanding a detachment of infantry against hostile Indians in Arizona and New Mexico. He was promoted to captaincy. He was made attending surgeon at the White House in the administration of President Cleveland and again for President McKinley.

HEADED 'ROUGH RIDERS'

When the war with Spain was declared in 1898 Gen. Wood was authorized to raise a volunteer cavalry regiment and was commissioned its colonel. This became famous as the "Rough Riders." Theodore Roosevelt was second in command.

Wood's next promotion was in charge of all volunteers at San Juan and Las Guasimas, with the rank of brigadier general. He was appointed governor of Santiago when that city was captured, and later became the governor of all the captured territory.

His work as administrator was so outstanding that later when an official government of Cuba had been organized Gen. Wood succeeded Maj. Gen. Brooke as military governor. By the sheer force of his character he moulded institutions out of chaos.

He was appointed brigadier general in the Regular Army in 1901, and two years later was assigned to duty in the Philippines. He became the first civil governor of the Moro province. On his return to the United States he received command of the eastern department of the Army and held this until 1910, when he was made chief of staff.

When the United States entered the World War Gen. Wood applied for service overseas. President Wilson, however, considered that his services would be of more value in this country. As a result he stayed here as an organizer and trainer of troops. He trained the Eighty-ninth Division and later the Tenth Division at Camp Funston.

He was finally sent overseas on an observation tour and was wounded at the front. At the armistice he was in command of the Tenth Division.

GRIMES OUT FOR JUDGESHIP

Declaring that when vacancies occur on the bench "the active and known worker in the organized ranks should first receive consideration for promotion or place," William D. Grimes, former assistant district attorney, today announced his candidacy for Common Pleas Court judge.

"The judicial office is obtained ostensibly by the votes of the people," he said. "It is therefore a political office like any other. In Allegheny county it is undoubtedly such in fact. The halo placed about the heads of the judiciary is only visible and attractive to the sycophant, the hypocrite and the uninformed."

Pastor Stays Firm on Doomsday Figures

Admitting that his information regarding the establishment of heaven here after the "end of the world" was largely speculative, albeit he was convinced personally, the Rev. Charles S. Poling, co-pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, in his sermon yesterday, answered his critics in the Presbyterian Banner.

He said he would neither apologize for nor withdraw any part of his assertion.

According to the Banner Mr. Poling predicted the new heaven would cover 1,1[illegible] square miles and would have a population of [illegible] 10 times the population of the globe. The Banner asked what seminary taught this geographical and statistical theology.

Mr. Poling replied that no seminary was responsible for his sermons and declared he got his inspiration from the Bible.

Find Baby Crematory Of Ancient Ohio

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—A baby crematory basin, regarded as a notable find in mound archaeological annals, has been recovered at the famous Seip Mound near here by Prof. H. C. Shetrone, curator of Ohio Museum and his assistants.

The basin measures 18 inches in length and 12 inches in width. It is believed the clay vessel was used for cremation of infants and small children by prehistoric inhabitants of Ohio. A larger basin, believed to have been used for adults, was found several seasons ago in the Hopewell group of mounds near here.

Sunny California Looks Good To Movie Man Back From Fight With London Fog For Film Scenes

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.—The more I hear of productions being made abroad, the less I think of the idea. Here is Herbert Brenon taking a company to London to film the exteriors for "Sorrell and Son." The rain and fog have been so bad that he is sailing in the next few days for good old California to make scenes that the fog would not permit him to take in London. He did, however, get some shots of Trinity College. You ought to hear Douglas Fairbanks on the subject of pictures made in Hollywood. I am going to write something about it next Sunday.

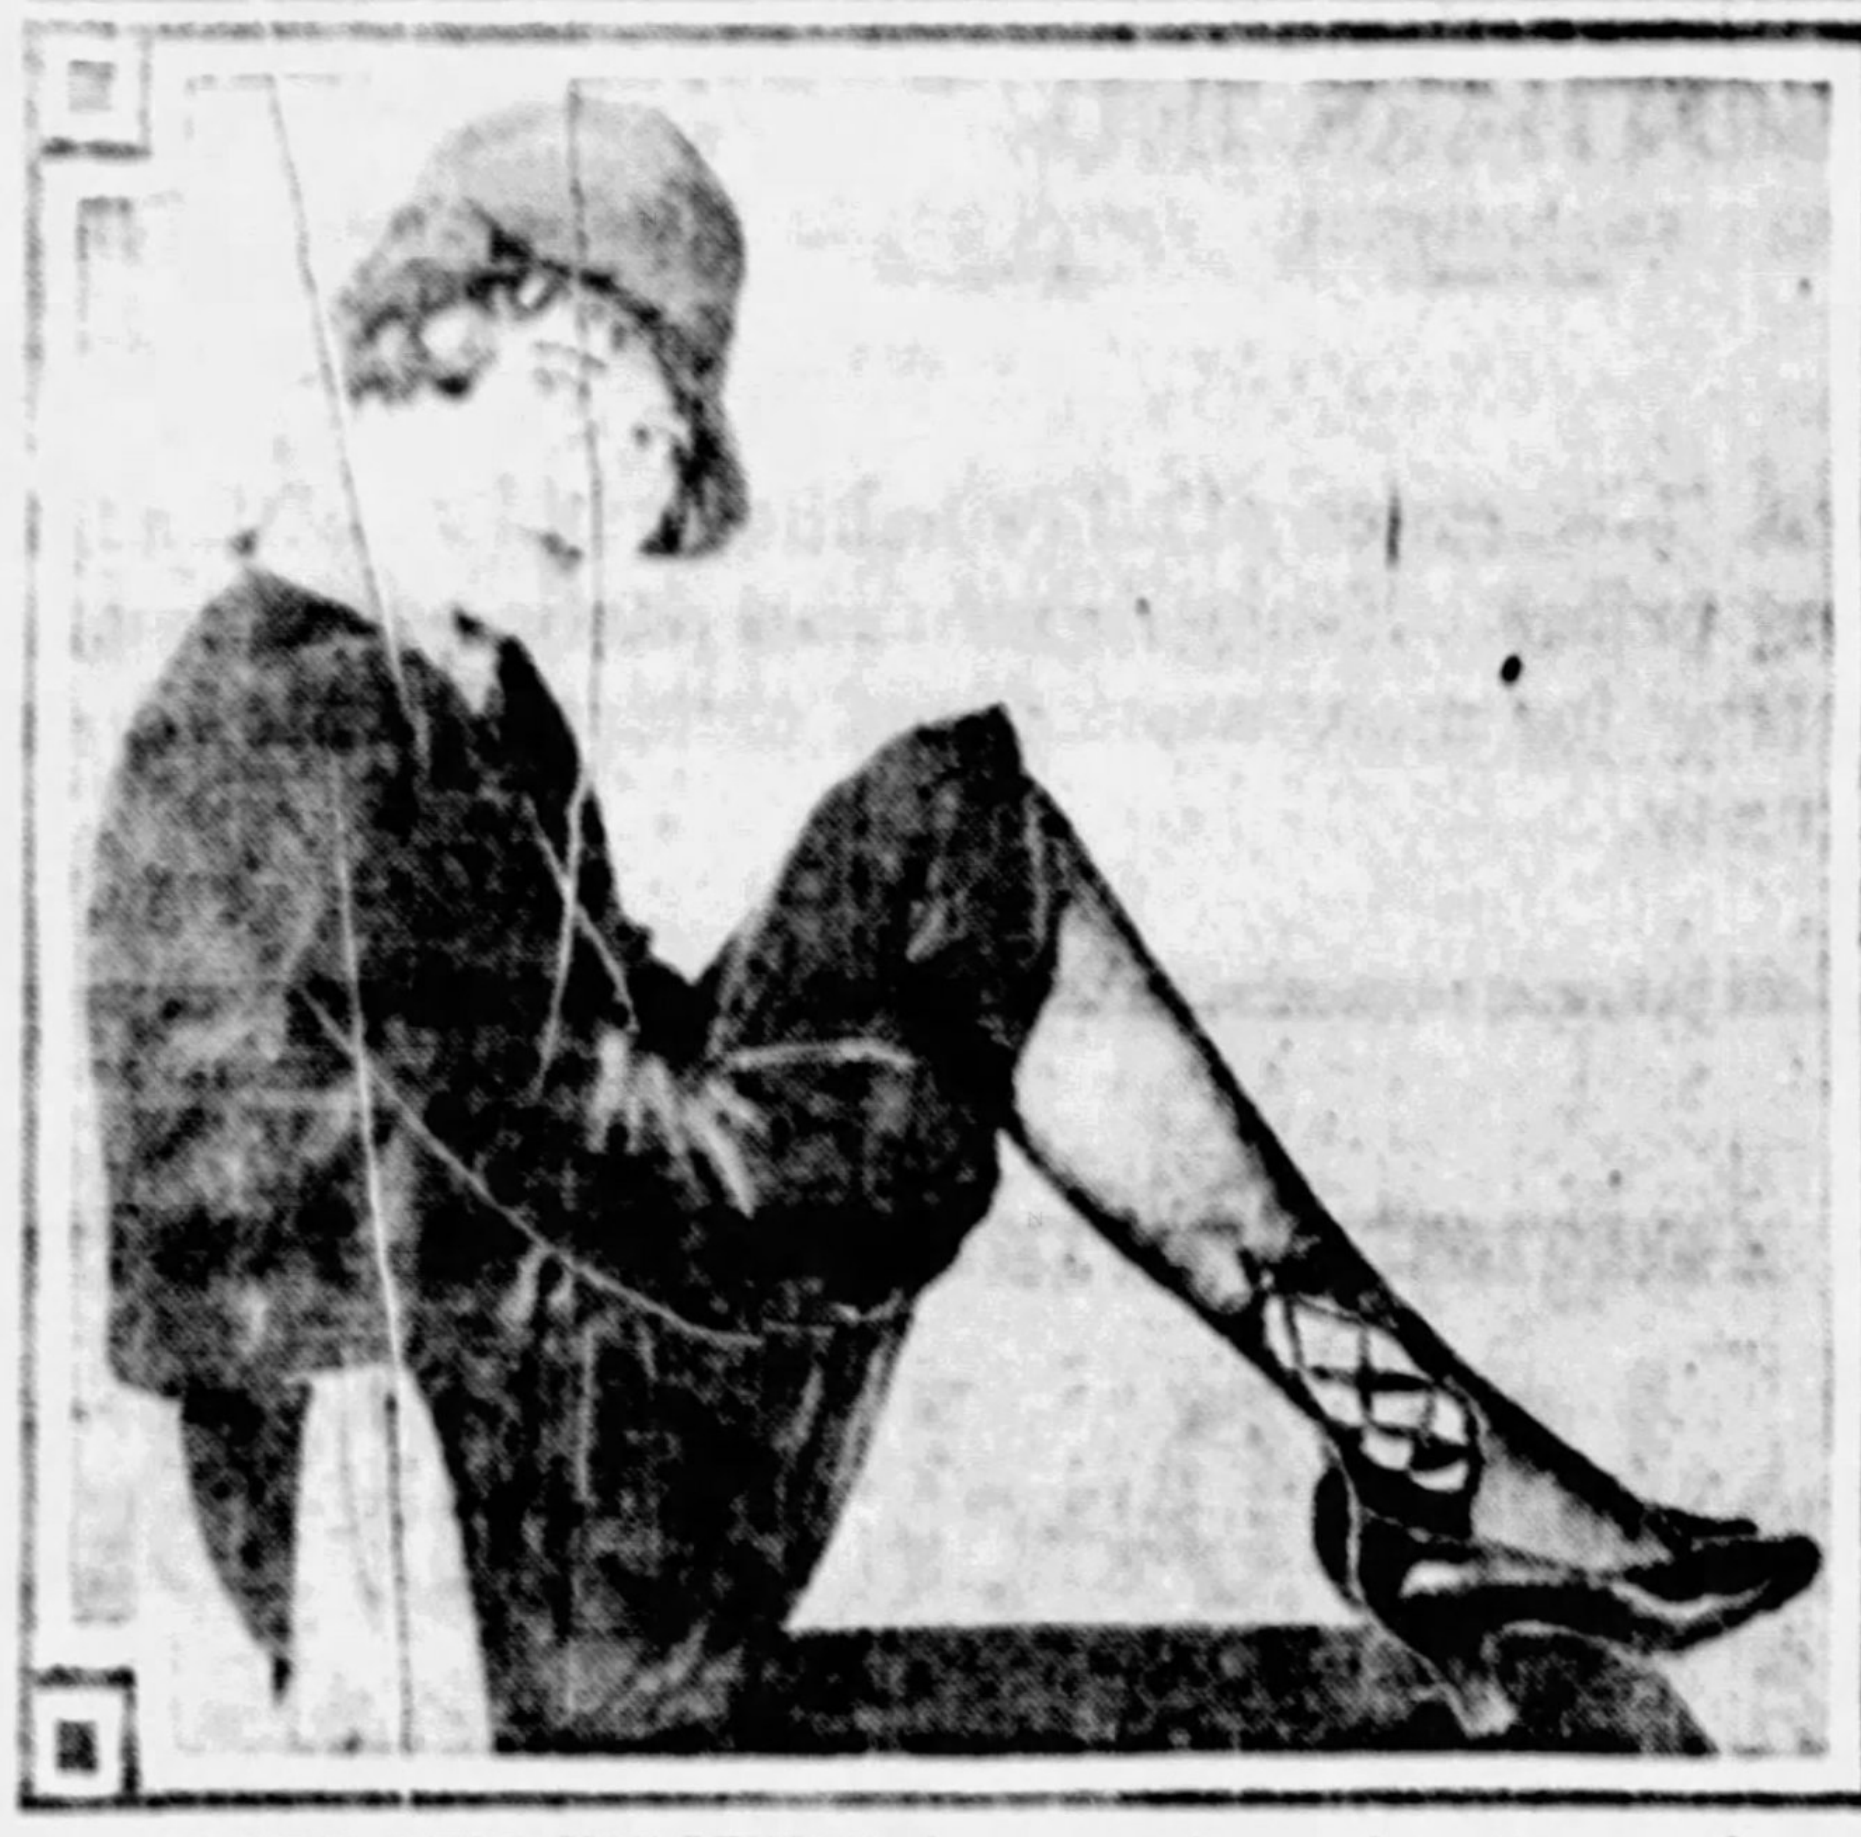
Columbia pictures certainly does bring back all the old timers.

Alice Calhoun, who for years was Vitagraph's pet and pride, has been signed for a role in "Forgotten Women." I don't mean, when I say old timers, that she is old—for Miss Calhoun is young and comely, but that she has been off the screen for so long it is news to hear she has returned. "Forgotten Women" features Conway Tearle and Dorothy Sebastian.

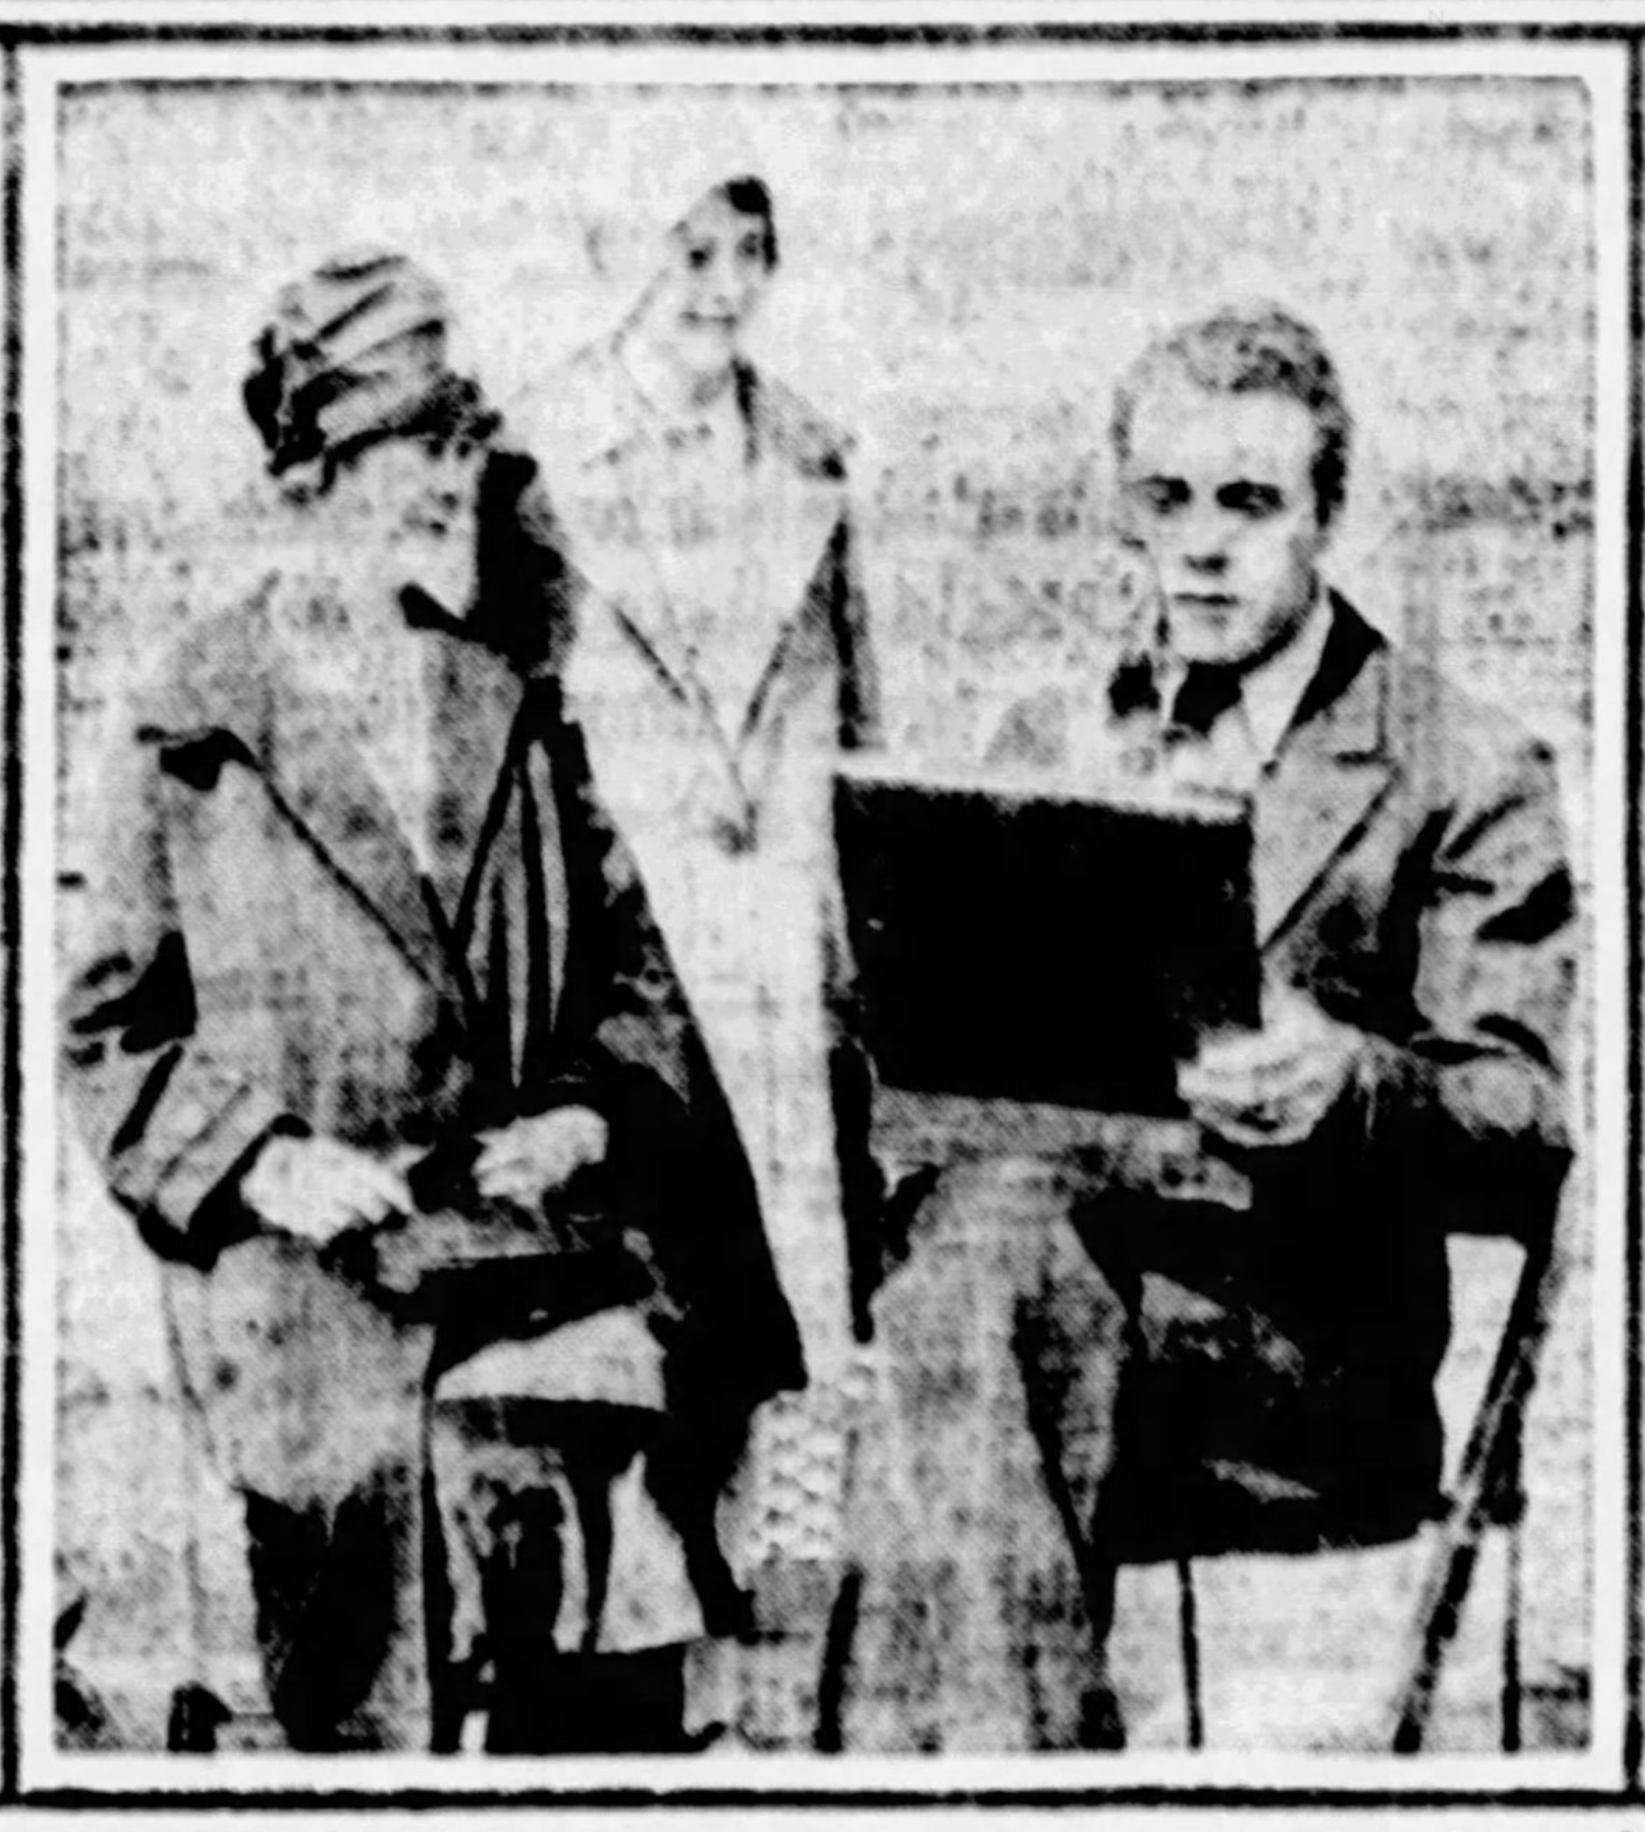
Hollywood's two most famous Oriental players, Sojin and Anna Mae Wong, have been added to Gilda Gray's cast of "The Devil Dancer." I am not so sure I should call Anna Mae Wong an Oriental, since she is a California girl, born of Chinese parents. Anne Schaeffer, Martha Mattox, Michael Vavitch, Barbara Tennant, Capt. Albert Konti and James Leong have also been added to the cast, which is now completed, with Clive Brooke as the male lead. Gilda says she is praying her clothes won't go up in smoke again.

This is the time of year when every director with the slightest chance picks out a trip for himself to New York. The new plays open here about the middle of August and it is a good time to be in the big town. I am not saying that Irvin Willat was motivated by any such purpose when he decided to go to Washington, D. C., to confer with naval officers there. He is directing "The Big Gun," an original story by Edward Montague, and is going to Washington to see that all the detail is correct.

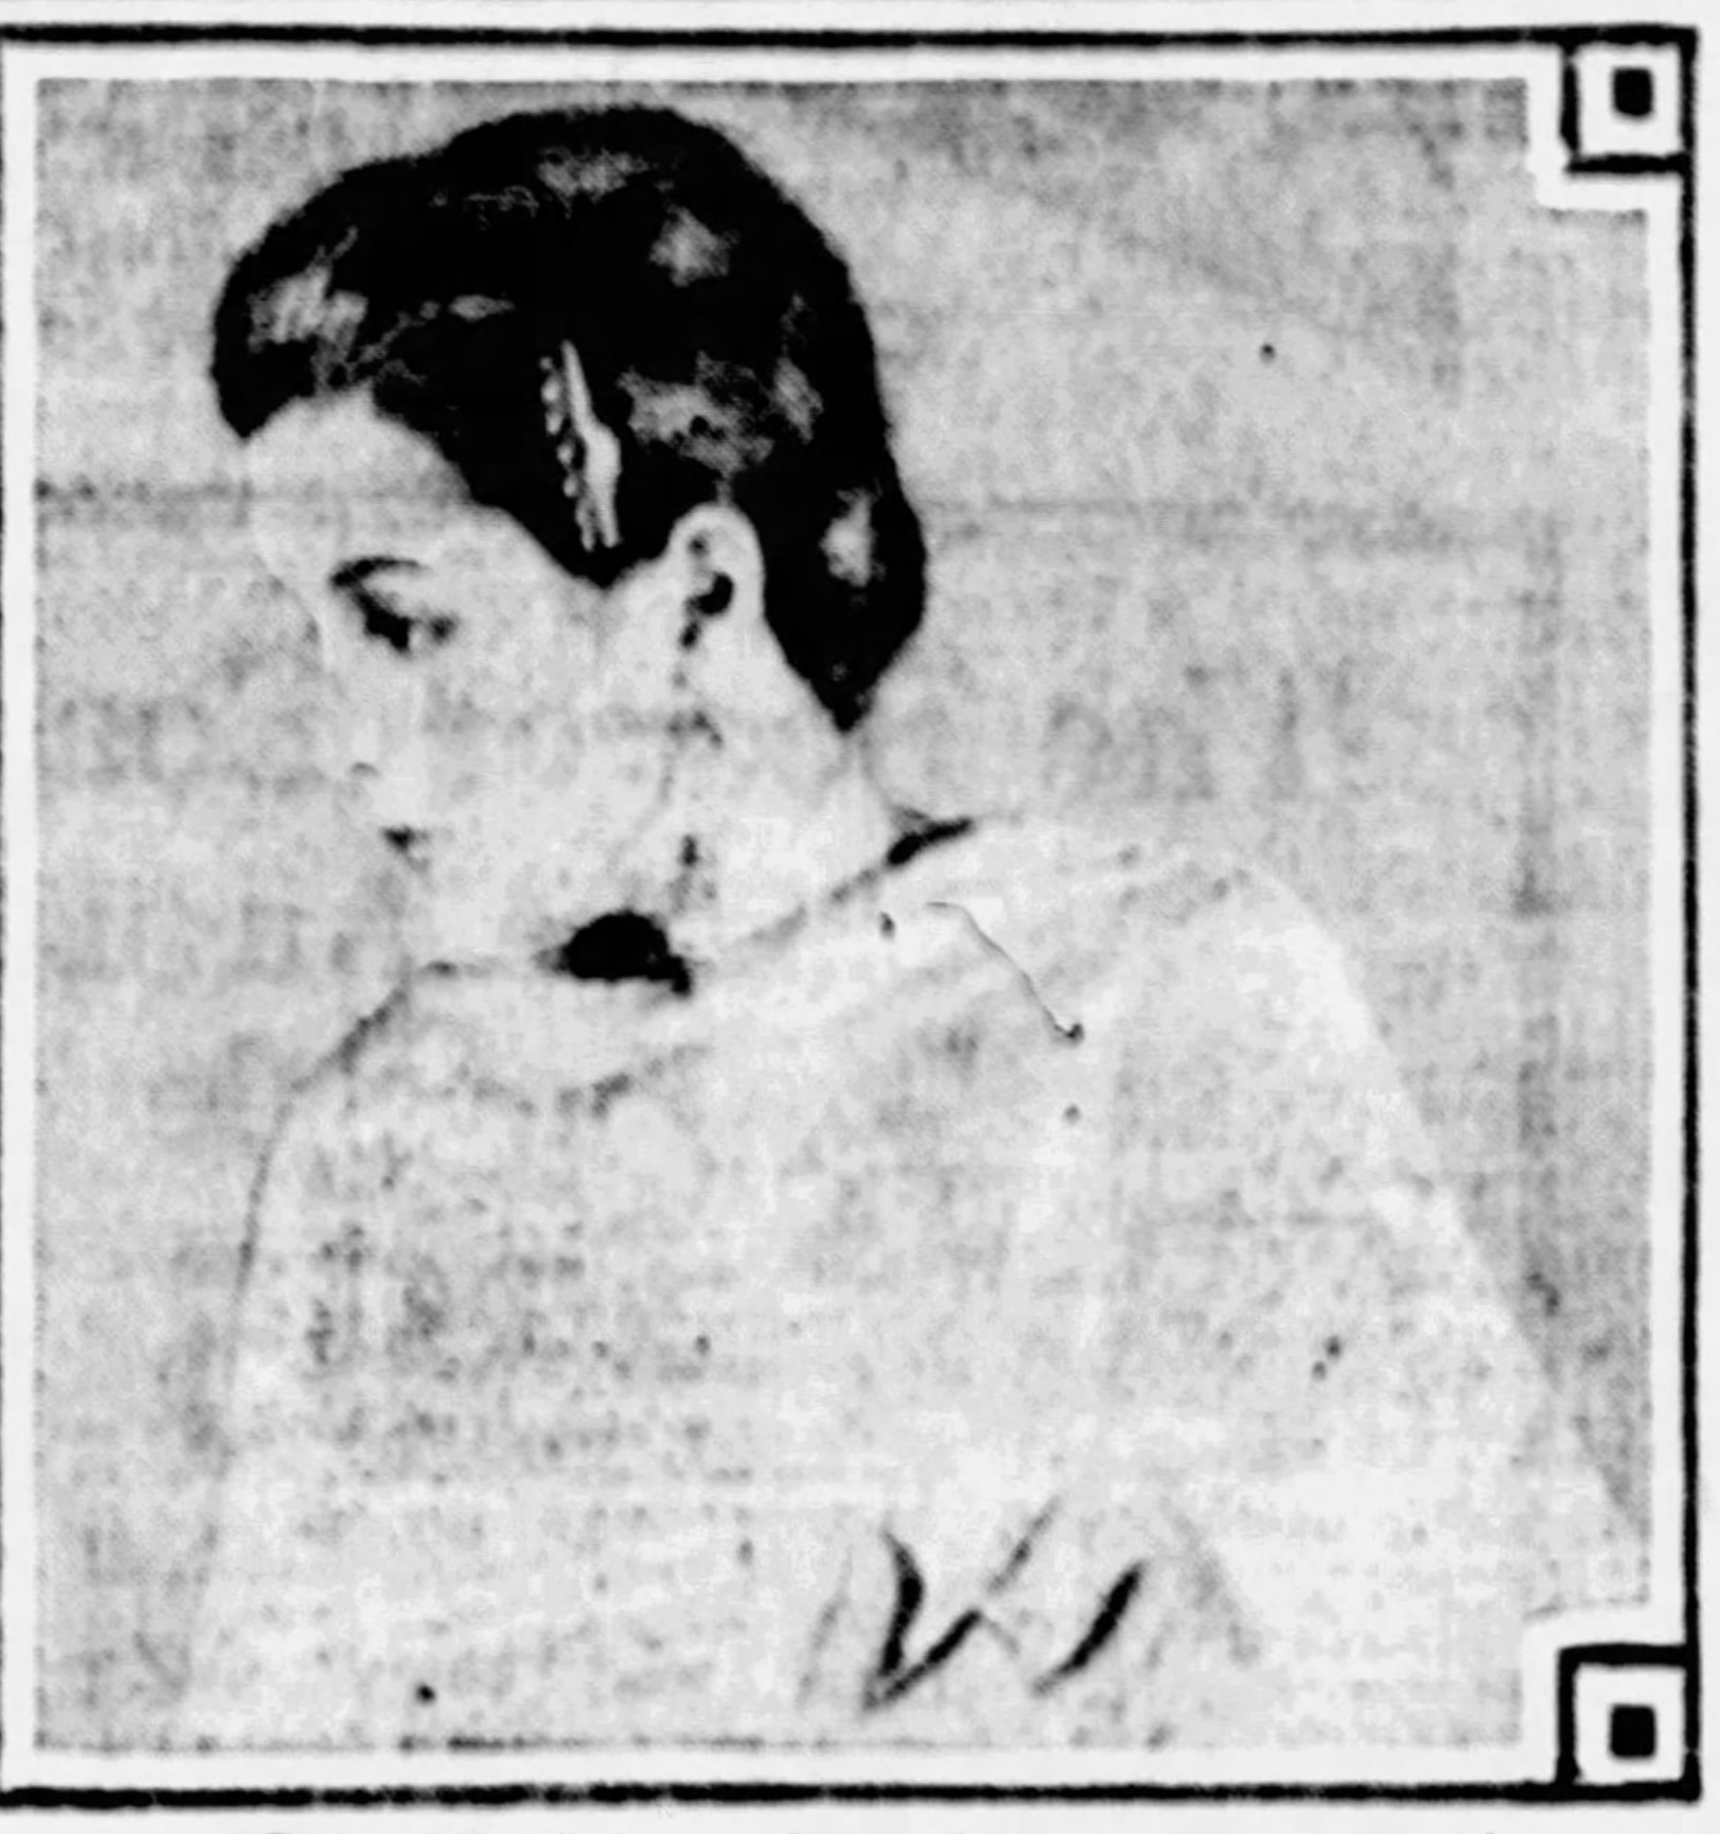
Keeping Cool .:. He's An Actor Now .:. Oriental Charmer



WHEN THE WEATHER is warm the modern "young things" blithely turn out ideas that will help to make it fair but cooler. Sally O'Neil, winsome screen star suggests that stockings laced at the sides offer "wide open spaces" to the ankle. And no person can deny that—successfully—can they?



JIMMY MURRAY'S mother and sister in New York didn't hear from him for three years after he went out West to seek his fortune. They are shown watching Jimmy making up for a part, for he's an actor now, playing lead in "The Crowd."



MARY ASTOR is proving quite a success as a movie vamp. Her latest role of this type is that of an oriental charmer in "Two Arabian Knights." This is a modern war comedy in which Louis Wolheim makes his screen debut.

Film Theaters Second Abroad But Play To Capacity

The motion picture has not, as yet, replaced the spoken play in foreign countries, says Pauline Starke.

"The picture theater itself is much in the minority," she said, "however, the few that are there prove to be playing to capacity houses, with long lines waiting for admittance, which proves that America is not the only place where the fans grow."

Houses of the spoken drama were much more plentiful, according to the star.

"I was only in Europe 19 days," she said, "but I took in all the shows that I possibly could. Everything is so dreadfully different there. All programs are sold, coffee is served between acts, the theaters seem so old and musty."

Of the foreign picture studios, Pauline cited the Berlin unit as the most complete.

"It would be wonderful to work there for a time at least," she smiled. "I think that every actress should have the opportunity of working in a foreign studio under foreign management. They have such a different way of doing everything—in some ways better, but in some, not as good as our own."

Prior to her trip abroad, Pauline completed her contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. She is now planning to free lance. Her motion picture career was started with the old Triangle organization.

With her large hazel eyes and black hair she resembles Gloria Swanson, a fact that has been noted to a great degree in her last few pictures.

"Yes, a great many people think we look alike," she said, "but I can't see it at all. It's a wonderful compliment and I appreciate it—but looking like some one else doesn't add a bit to one's own popularity, and that's what counts."

Jesse James, Jr., Aids In Putting Father On Screen

Jesse James, the gentleman who became celebrated as a bandit when the first train robbery in history was staged in 1838, is now coming to the screen. A picture based on his life and titled "Jesse James" is now in production at a Hollywood studio.

The bandit's son, Jesse James, Jr., a Los Angeles lawyer, is acting as technical advisor and biographer for the production.

Fred Thompson, Western star, will be seen in the role of Jesse James.

English Stage Player In Mary Pickford's New Comedy

Evelyn Hall, English dramatic stage star, this week was cast in Mary Pickford's new five-and-ten-cent-store comedy, "My Best Girl." Miss Hall in private life is Mrs. Claude King, wife of the actor, and this is her first picture comedy. Born in Harrowgate, she early showed a taste for Shakespearean roles, and for two years toured the British Isles with a repertoire organization. Coming to America, she played in "Richard III" with John Barrymore, and with the Selwyn organization. Her first screen appearance was in "Tom Jones," an English production, but later she played in Corinne Griffith's "Six Days."

MAINE HAS $1-A-YEAR MAN

AUGUSTA, Me., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—A peacetime dollar-a-year man serves Maine. Lewis W. Spinney of Woodford, a corn borer inspector, gets one "iron man" every twelve months under an order in Council.

Star Born in Church After Storm Blows Tent Away

Few actors of stage or screen have had careers so colorful as that of Buster Keaton, it is said, whose latest comedy is "College."

Keaton was born on November 4, 1895, during a cyclone and he is declared to have enjoyed a cyclonic life ever since. His mother and father, Myra and Joe Keaton, were traveling the country with a tent show, in which the late Harry Houdini, the magician and hand-cuff king, was a partner. On the night the stork arrived a tornado struck that part of Kansas and away went the show, tent and all. The only building left standing was a church, and there Mrs. Keaton was taken. Buster was born in the sacristy.

The Keatons finally dissolved partnership with Houdini and launched into vaudeville. Buster became a part of the act at the age of three and during the next 16 years he visited every city in the United States and the British colonies. In 1916 Buster refused an offer of $750 a week at the Winter Garden in New York to enter motion pictures at $40 a week. Early in 1917 the comedian enlisted and went to France. Upon his return, after serving 18 months as a private overseas, he went to Hollywood and continued his affiliation with the Joseph M. Schenck organization.

Jolson's First Movie "The Jazz Singer" Near Finish

The film version of "The Jazz Singer," starring Al Jolson, is within a few weeks of completion now. Of the film portion there are only 10 days or two weeks of shooting to be done. After this will come the Vitaphone recording of Jolson's voice, synchronized with the action of certain scenes.

"The Jazz Singer" is his first screen appearance. There is a large chance though, that it will not be his last. "They're either going to like it, or, well, I hope, and I think that it's going to be good (confidentially, I think it ought to be great.) I don't know though, maybe I won't wait to find out, but just hie me off to Europe some place until all the smoke blows over and I know the final results."

Actually, though, Jolson is optimistic and hopeful of success.

NEGRI AND LUBITSCH ARE POSSIBLE TEAM

In former days Lubitsch and Pola Negri were a great artistic combination. Some of the best Pola Negri pictures came from Lubitsch's direction. Now that he is back in the Paramount fold there is considerable speculation as to what he will do. It is probable that he will direct Pola Negri in "The Life of Rachel," a character portrayal based on the life of the French actress.

HOPE HAMPTON HOME; PICTURE MADE ABROAD

Hope Hampton has returned from Europe, where she completed "Springtime of Love," a film done entirely in technicolor. The picture is based on the Dumas novel, "Marriage of Convenience."

COMEDY BY M'GUIRE IN PITT TONIGHT

Herbert Clark and Anne Forrest will play the leading roles and in the supporting cast will be Mabel Kroman, Fred Sullivan, John W. Follow this simple daily rule to keep "That Schoolgirl Complexion"
By NORMA SHEARER

CLEAR, radiant skins have come to thousands who, exhausting costly beauty treatments, have learned this simple rule of nature.

Today it is credited by millions with bestowing that schoolgirl complexion on those who make a nightly habit of it.

Wherever you go, you see fresh, charming faces, a result of following it.

Wash the face gently with Palmolive. Massage its balmy olive and palm oil lather into the skin.

Rinse with warm water; then with cold. That is all—it's nature's rule for keeping that schoolgirl complexion.

Largely on expert advice, millions use Palmolive Soap as above; and touch their faces with no other. For it is a true complexion soap. A soap made of cosmetic oils; made for one purpose only—to protect and beautify the skin.

Do that regularly, and particularly before bed. Note how much better your skin in even one week. Use powder and make-up all you like. Never leave them on over night.

GET REAL PALMOLIVE

Get Palmolive today. Costs but 10c a cake. Use no other on your face. But be sure you get GENUINE Palmolive. Crude imitations, represented to be of olive and palm oils, are not the same as Palmolive. Remember that and take care. The Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago, U. S. A.

DR. COX SCORES SACCO CASE DECISION

PARIS, Aug. 8—(AP.)—In the shadow of the great Arc de Triomphe, where repose France's unknown soldier, and in the presence of 200 Americans, representatives of French and American governments and the commander of the American Legion of Paris, the Rev. Dr. James R. Cox, noted Pittsburgh priest, yesterday declared it unfortunate "we do not have a man big enough and powerful enough in our United States to prevent the outrage that is about to be perpetrated against Sacco and Vanzetti."

The occasion for the Pittsburgh clergyman's remarks was a ceremony at the tomb of the unknown soldier, which had been arranged by 200 Pittsburgh pilgrims to Loudres prior to their return to America on the Minnekasda last night.

FATHER COX ASHAMED

Representing the United States at the memorial service was Lieutenant Joseph Glasgow, military attache, American Embassy; for France Minister of War, Commandant Charles Pischepain, and for the American Legion, Commander Charles Hicks of Paris Post No. 1. A huge wreath bearing the inscription, "Du Pilgrimage De Pittsburgh Aux Glorieux Perlus De France," was placed on the tomb by the four youngest members of the pilgrimage, enumerating liberty, justice, equality, love and mercy, for which the unknown soldier and his vast host of buddies died.

Father Cox pleaded for application of these same principles to the Sacco and Vanzetti case. He added, "I am ashamed to admit that the world is protesting with no result against a popularly considered unjust sentence meted out to Sacco and Vanzetti.

"They condemned them on circumstantial evidence and doubt exists in public mind as to their guilt. Why then not give them the benefit of the doubt, show a little love and mercy and thus help preserve the unbreakable ties that bind the stars and stripes with the tricolored cocade of France? Unknown soldier, I call upon you to ask God to prevent this miscarriage of justice.

"It is your affair because you died to prevent just such things and give to all the undisputed right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, no matter what opinions might be upheld by the individual or group."

HONOR U. S. WAR DEAD

Before leaving Paris for Bologna, the Pittsburghers also paid tribute to America's war dead by decorating the graves of 130 Pennsylvanians buried in Suresnes Cemetery. They were escorted through the Paris burial grounds by Colonel C. W. Van Duyne, American graves registration service.

The party will arrive in New York August 15.

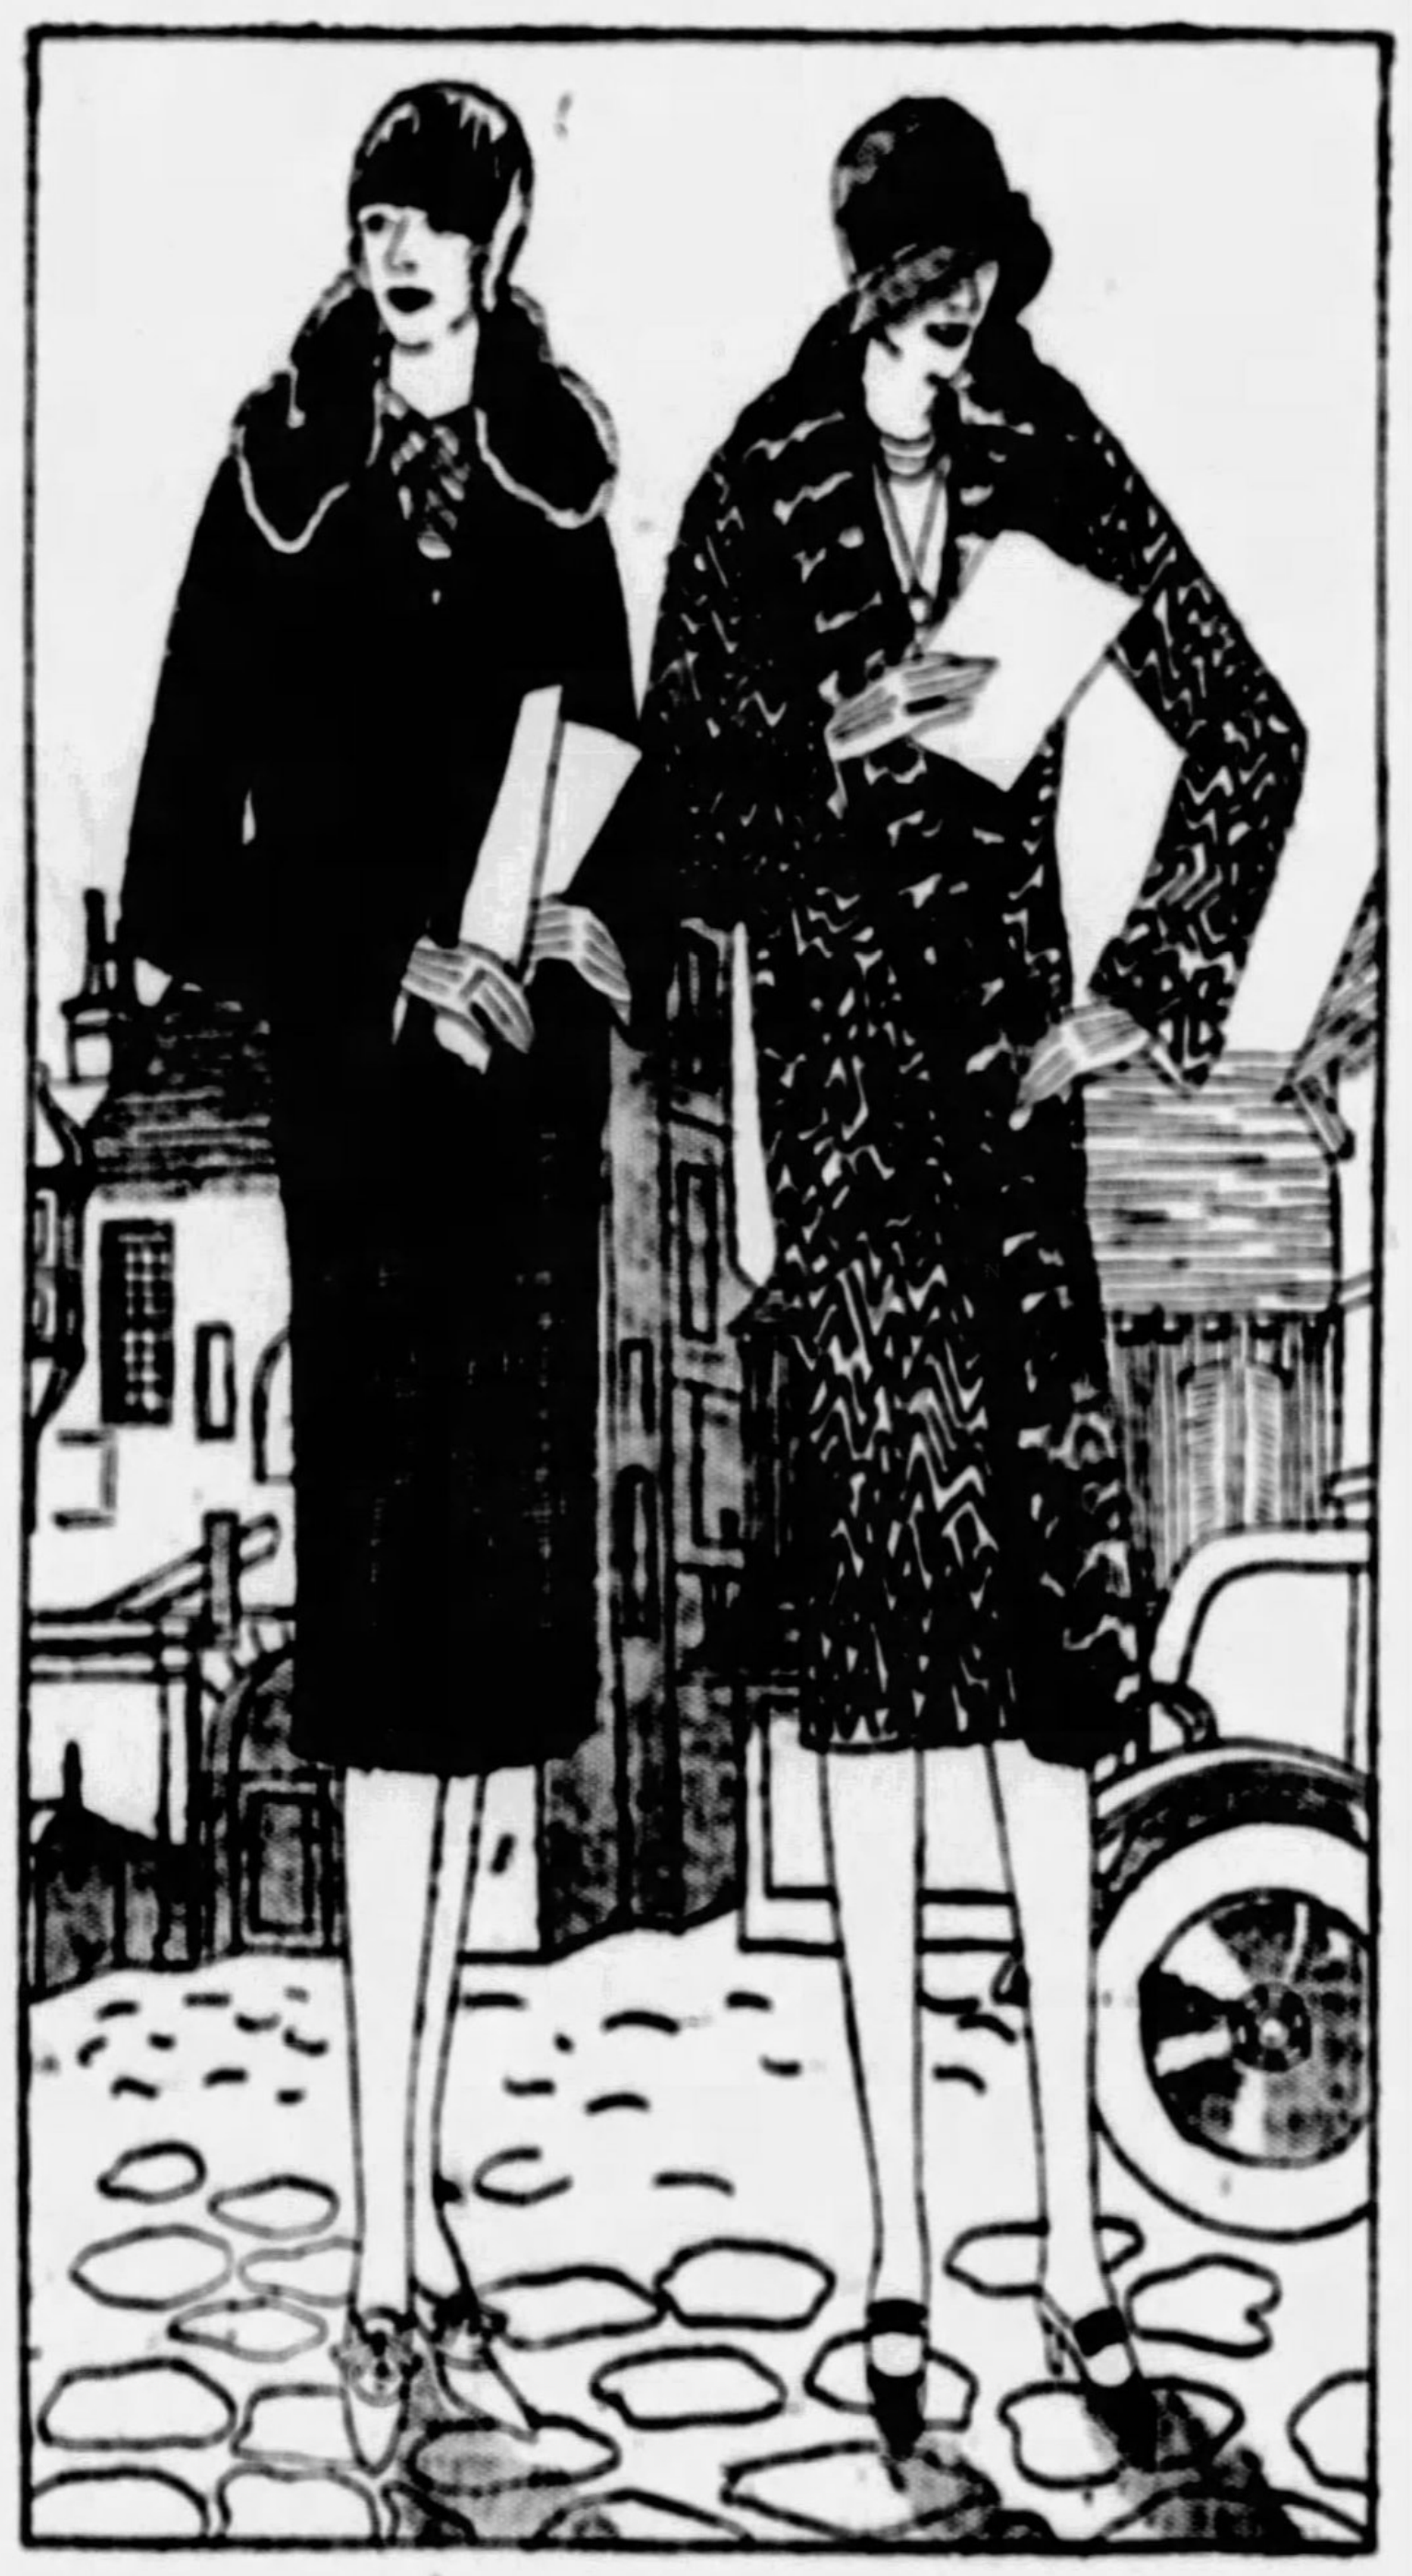
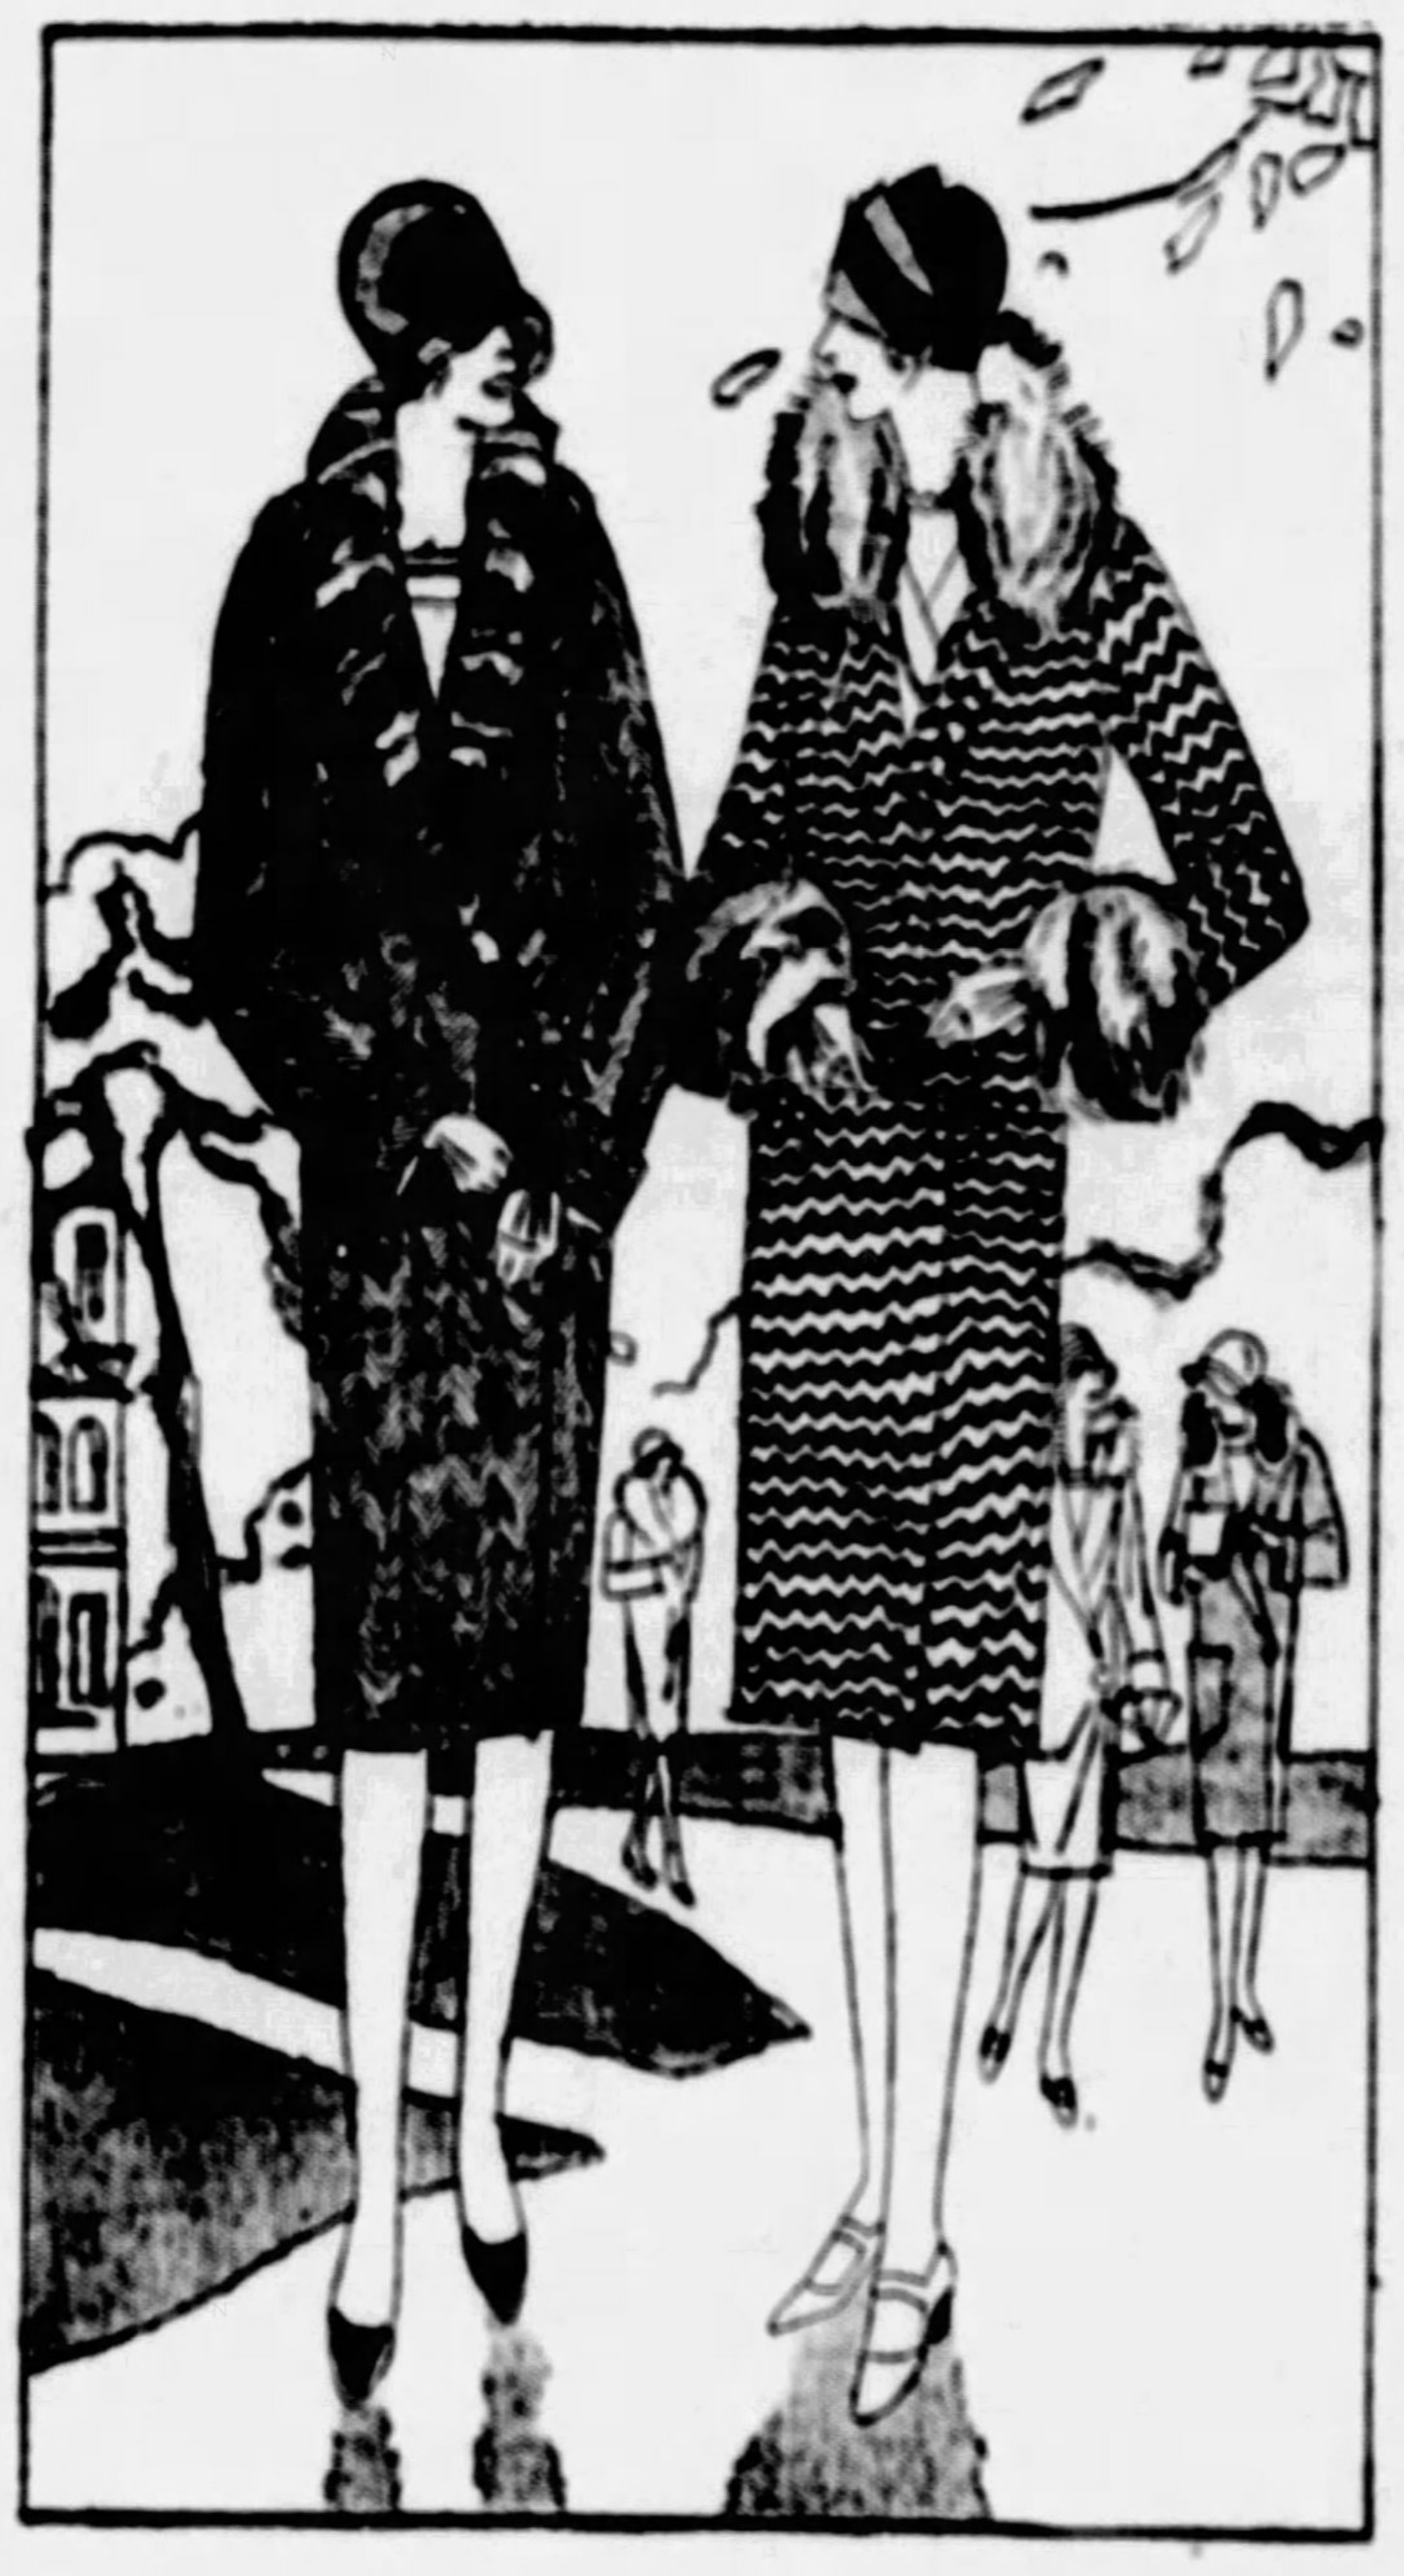
WEAR WEAVE COATS
$55



A Coat Occasion Made to Order

PITTSBURGH'S Style-Supreme Store demonstrates its Fashion leadership and value-giving powers in a carefully prepared advance sale of 800 Wear-Weave Coats of highest character.

They are year-around coats—for now as well as fall and winter—suited to steamer, motor, resort and campus wear. Styled in smart, simple lines, they are the very essence of chic, and they were chosen with a knowledge of what will be worn the coming season. There is a place for such a garment in the wardrobe of every woman, miss and junior-miss.



Fur Trimming....

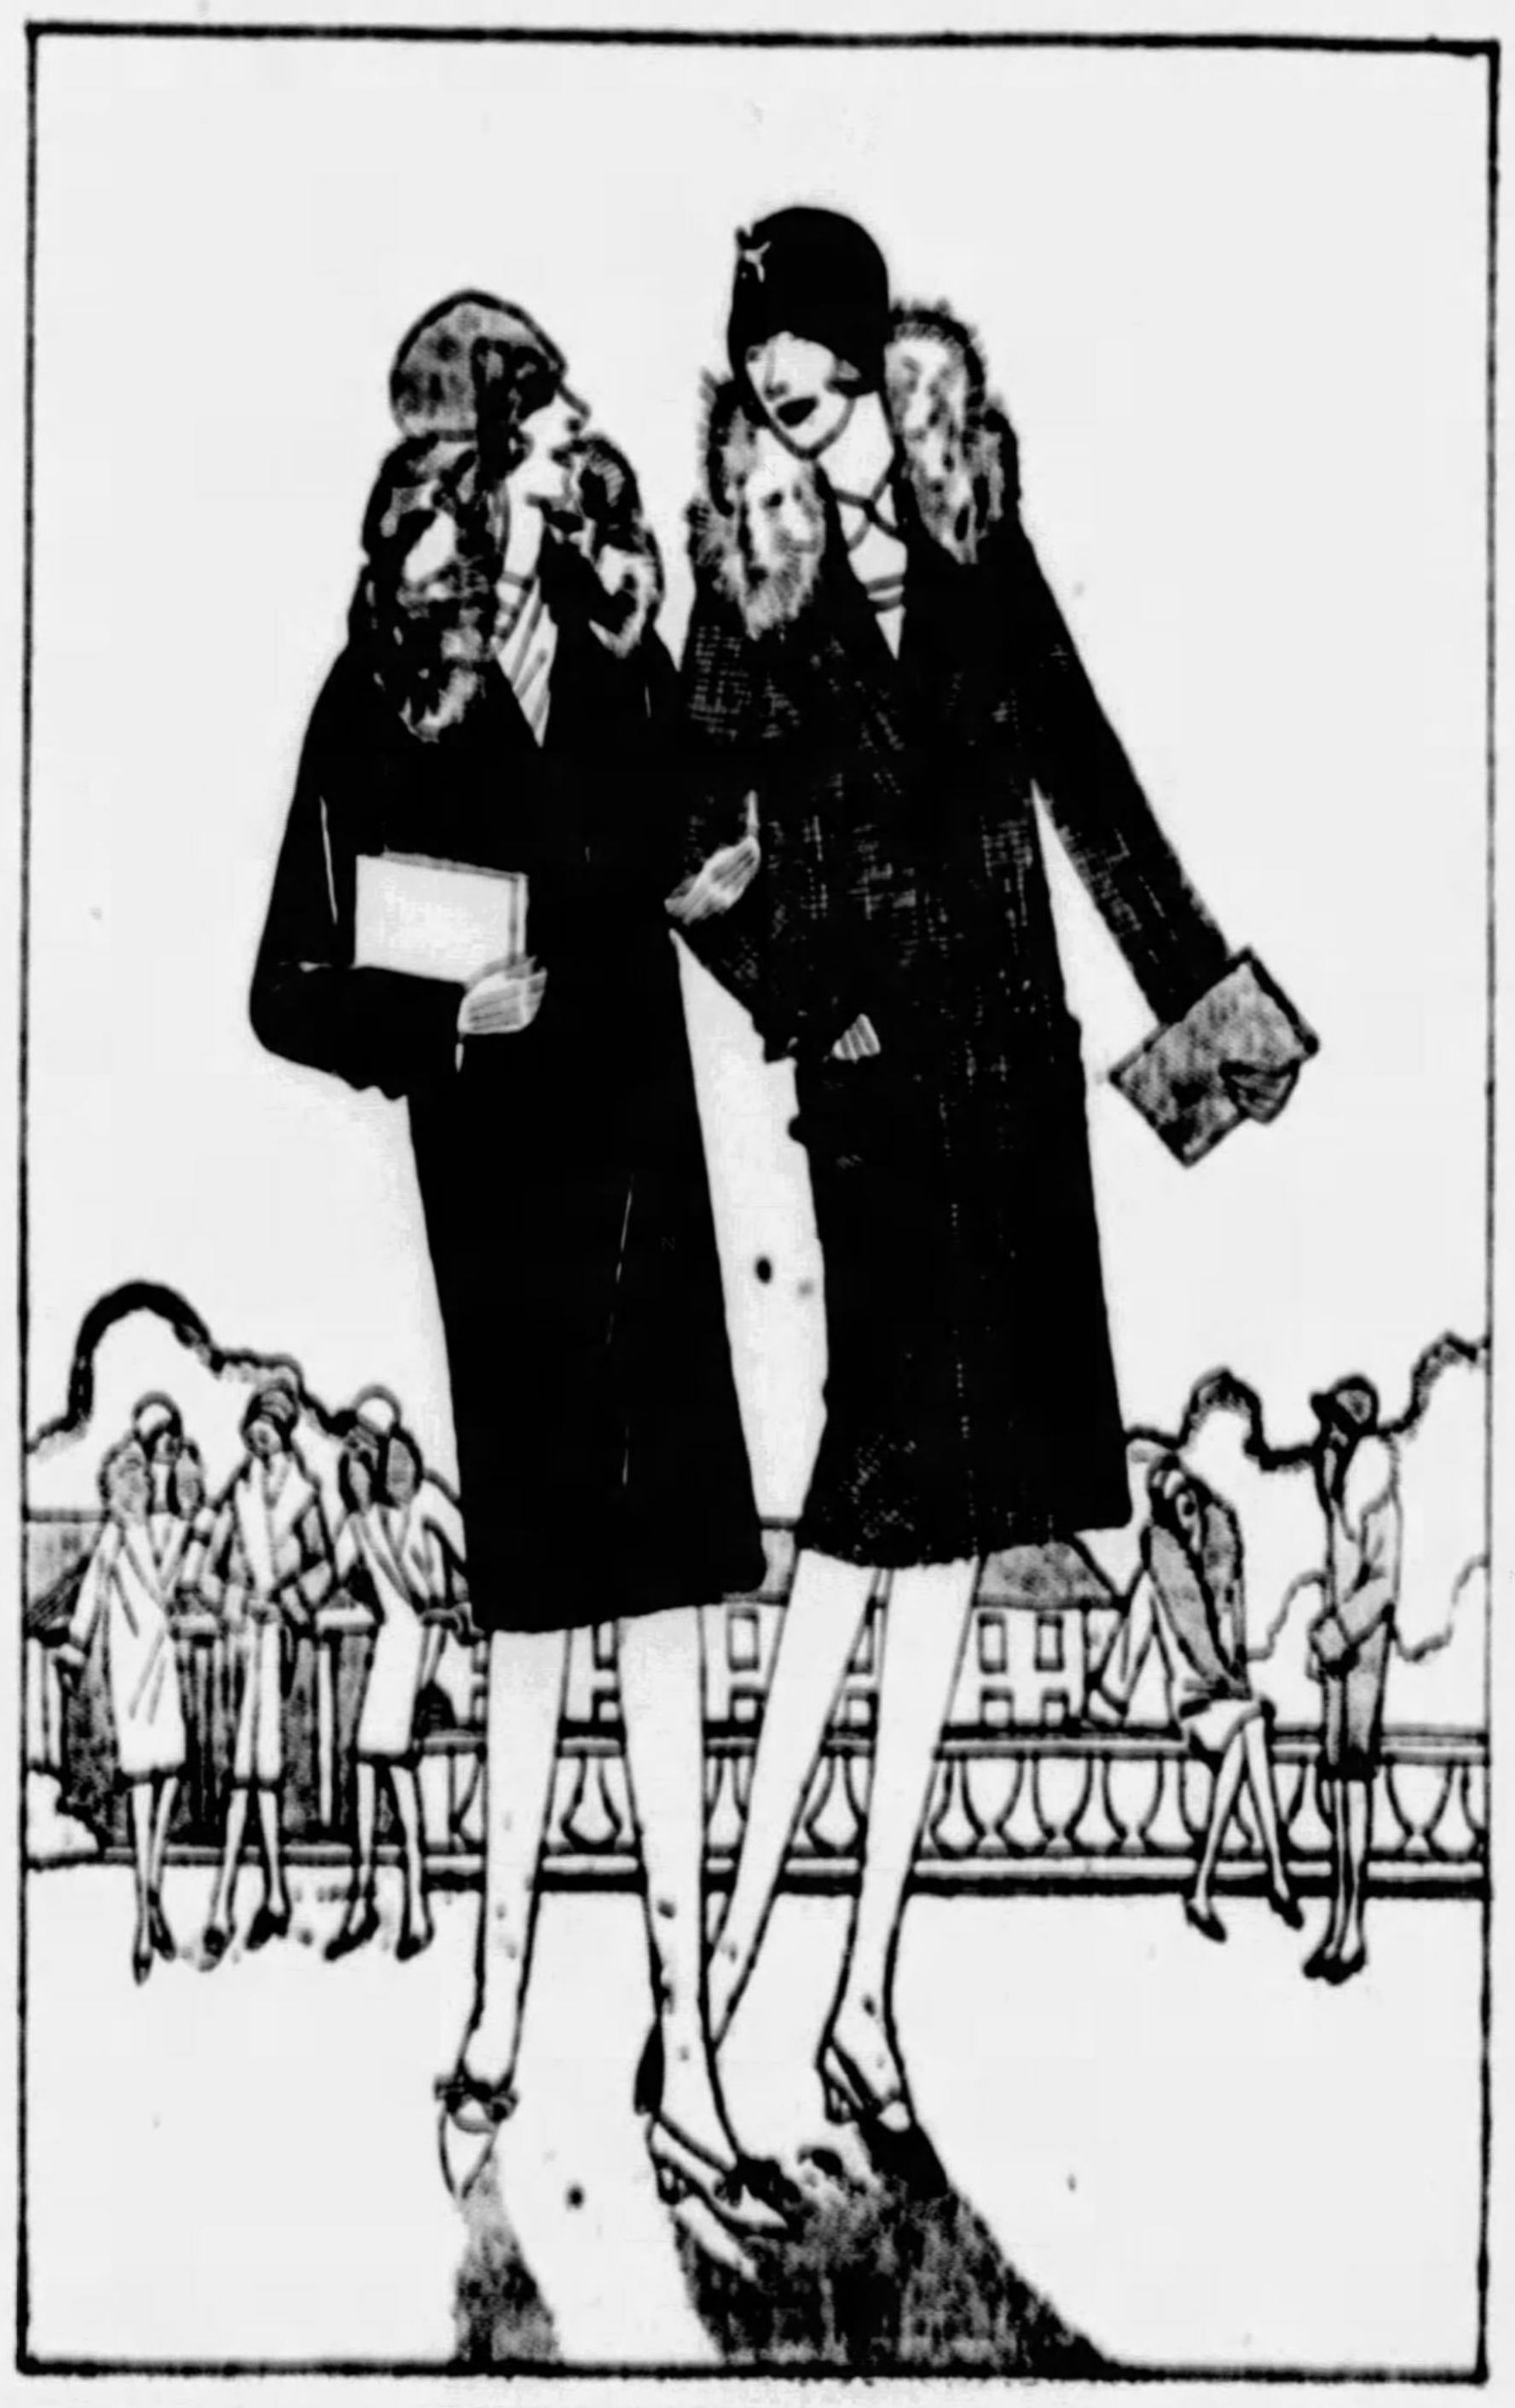
Squirrel, beaver, caracul, nutria, American opossum, Jap fox, badger, kit fox, wolf, raccoon and mountain goat, used in large, graceful collars, with matching cuffs in some instances. Collar styles offer choice of Johnny, tuxedo, notch, plain and mushroom. The fur itself, purchased separately, would in many of these coats almost equal the price of the coats themselves.

• • • •

Fabrics....

The finest of imported and domestic materials—fabrics that are warm, but are surprisingly lightweight. The coat facings are unusually wide, and the lining of flat crepe, together with a high character of needlework, give a finished effect of the highest order. They are coats which one may wear to any simple, informal occasion, or to wear when one wishes to save a more expensive dressy or fur coat.

—Horne's, Second Floor—



Colors, Patterns....

The showings reveal the last word in new shades. These are light and dark tans, wood brown mixtures, cocoa, red, navy, autan, camel, gray, green, black-and-white, red-and-white and various hues of these colors.

An assortment of patterns that are well suited to sports, travel and town wear — stripes, diamonds, checks, mixtures, shadow plaids and pin checks.

• • • •

Sizes....

For women, 34 to 46, and 44½ to 52½ in large sizes; for misses, 14 to 20; for junior-misses, 13 to 17. Each group is admirably styled to the type of figure for which it is intended. The longer furs, so becoming to youth, are deftly manipulated to achieve a charming effect, while the shorter, flatter furs are used to conform to the more mature style of women.

The Miracle of VANILLA

The Slaving Peon and the Man of Science Unite to Supply the World's Most Popular Ice Cream Flavor!

From the hillsides and the valleys of picturesque Mexico the hard-working peons and Yaqui Indians carry the precious fruit of a plant known to the men of science as the "Vanilla Planifolis."

Under the tropic sun the Indian "hands over" to the scientist and manufacturer this fruit, the famous Vanilla Bean, from which they make the extract for the most popular ice cream flavor in the world—Vanilla!

Remember these two interesting facts

when you dip your spoon in a plate of Tech Vanilla

1. That sixty per cent of ALL the ice cream sold in the United States every day is Vanilla!
2. That in Pittsburgh the overwhelming preference is for TECH VANILLA because it is the finest and purest of all.

LEMONS WHITEN THE SKIN

Better than "Bleaches" for Freckles, Tan, etc.

The juice of two lemons squeezed into a bottle with Orchard White will soothe sunburn, and clear up freckles, tan, discolored skin quicker than anything you can buy already prepared, and it doesn't cost you near as much.

Any druggist can sell you Orchard White, and it only takes a minute to mix it with the juice of two lemons. Then you have enough to last you all season.

It makes a delightful lotion which you can put on your face, neck, arms or hands at any time, and it will keep them nice and white. Mix a bottle now, so you will have it handy to use should your skin begin to turn dark or rough.—Advertisement.

A Message to Underweight Men and Women

The one supremely good health-building tonic that is also the one great weight-producer known to modern science the country over is McCoy's Tablets.

They build flesh where flesh is needed—sunken cheeks, neck and chest—and many a man and woman, skinny and scrawny, have thanked McCoy's after a few weeks treatment for the decided improvement in looks and figure.

Many times the increase in weight is astonishing—one exceedingly thin woman gained 19 pounds in 22 days.

McCoy takes all the risk—Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking 4 sixty-cent boxes of McCoy's Tablets or 2 One Dollar boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health—your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price.

The name McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets has been shortened—just ask for McCoy's Tablets at May's Drug Stores or any drug store in America.—Advertisement.

Weather Conditions.

The pressure is high along the Atlantic Coast, and a high of unusual intensity has developed over the Northwest. It is central over Saskatchewan, Eastern Montana and Western North Dakota, and covers the Canadian Northwest provinces, the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado. It is attended by clear skies and low temperatures. At Swift Current, the lowest temperature this morning was two degrees below freezing.

Low pressure, central north of the lakes, extends southwestward over the lakes, the Ohio Valley states, the Central Mississippi Valley states, and the Southern Plains states. It is causing cloudy weather and showers and thunderstorms throughout that section.

The temperatures are normal or above from the Plains states eastward, but in the Dakotas and westward throughout the high pressure area the temperatures are much below the normal.

SU-THOL for Headaches

Relieve headache or periodic pain without any bad after-effects. German and American Science produced Su-thol to stop all pain.

"I used to have to go to bed for 3 days every month on account of terrible headaches, until I started using Su-thol tablets. I had tried many things for relief, but got none until I tried Su-thol. It is the best medicine I ever used. Publish this for I would be glad if all women could get the benefit I have. Signed, Mrs. C. H. Rutledge, 4474 W. 157th St., Cleveland, Ohio."

COMMENT ON GIRLS

"In a world of round, freckled, too fat, too bony and unmatched shoulders—Sally's are a marvel." So explains Beatrice Burton, noted novelist, in her latest and most engrossing serial, "Sally's Shoulders." So she says of her blue-eyed, sweet-faced, gay young Sally. The kind of a lazy girl Sally's sister is can be gleaned from this:

"I just loathe the thought of going down to that office and taking dictation from that horrid Mr. Bursall," whines Millie.

These very diferent sisters will enthrall you in "Sally's Shoulders," which begins next Monday in the Sun-Telegraph.

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Inauguration of passenger service on the Chicago-Kansas City-Dallas route of the National Air Transport, Inc., beginning September 1, was announced today by the company's vice president and general manager, Col. Paul Henderson. On the same day the company will begin operations of its mail and express route from Chicago to New York.

The passenger rate will be 10 cents a mile. On this basis the fare from Chicago to Dallas will be $100, to Kansas City $46, to St. Joseph, Mo., $39.40, to Moline $14.30, to Wichita, Kan., $62.60, to Oklahoma City $78.60, to Fort Worth $96.60. AIRPLANE PASSENGERS CAN NOW GET INSURANCE

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Life insurance policies now cover flying, it has been revealed. Insurance companies are keeping pace with aviation in making policies to airplane passengers on a liberal basis.

"Common sense applied to flying does not present an extra hazard," declared Eugene E. Andrews of the New York Life Insurance Company. "That is why policies permit it."

W. VA. MAN FOUND GUILTY

LOGAN, W. Va., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The trial of Will Bush on charges of unlawfully wounding Squire Elias Workman of Harts Creek on a public road near here June 7, last, ended in Circuit Court with the jury returning a verdict of guilty.

MISSING AFTER DEMANDING $100

Norva Smith, 20, Point Pleasant, W. Va., stranded, who sought aid from Pittsburgh police to collect more than $100 salary she claimed due her from Fred Parks, crew manager for the International Sales Company, of Chicago, disappeared Saturday after lodging her complaint.

Parks, who satisfied police with his explanation, this morning said that the girl has not been employed by his company since July 26, when she said she was getting "tired of work and would like to go home." The hotel bill at the Monongahela House, amounting to $8, was contracted and charged to Parks after she left his employ.

REDOUBLE EFFORTS TO END FOREST FIRES

Seattle, Wash., August 8.—(AP.)—A forecast of continued warm weather today saw a redoubling of efforts to stamp out hundreds of forest fires which have sprung up throughout the Pacific Northwest. To date, the damage to timber in Washington, Oregon and Idaho has been small, as the blazes have been confined chiefly to logged-off land and small second-growth timber. Fear was expressed, however, that strong winds would fan the fires into a conflagration which would bring costly destruction.

HUNT WHITE INDIANS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Dickey sailed yesterday for Borneo with the announced intention to find and photograph an almost legendary tribe of white Indians.

RAZOR WIELDER KILLS ONE, SLASHES ANOTHER

One Negro was killed and another seriously cut when an unidentified Negro raced across Penn avenue and attacked them wtih a razor while they were walking with two women, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets yesterday. Monroe Hackey, 22, died almost instantly, and London Fulton, 21, is in West Penn Hospital. Hackney's wife, Betty Lee Hackney, 18, and her sister, Mattie Lou Peterson, 19 are held at Penn Avenue Police Station as suspicious persons.

Sally can beat any doctor at spreading happiness. Her prescription may be found in "Sally's Shoulders," starting next Monday in The Sun-Telegraph.

SHIRLEY J. CASE.

Prof. Case of Chicago has just completed a startling life of Jesus Christ. The book will be issued soon by the University of Chicago press. According to Prof. Case, who is a noted biblical authority, the story of the birth of Christ and the miracles performed by Him and about Him were contrived by the disciples in competition with other gods. Jesus never claimed for Himself divine powers, nor did He ever think of Himself as the Son of God, Prof. Case avers.

FISHER TO GET COAL TOWNS' CHARGES

A. Boyd Hamilton, secretary to Gov. John S. Fisher, has wired business men of New Kensington and nearby coal towns that he will lay their plea "for restoration of law and order" among the Pennsylvania coal and iron police before the Governor when the executive returns from the West.

Fred J. Broad, banker and real estate broker, who presided at last Friday night's mass meeting of citizens in New Kensington, and who sent a warm protest against alleged law violations of sworn-in deputies guarding nonunion coal company operations, said today he would continue to press the case until action is obtained.

Mr. Broad said every effort would be made to have the state authorities "put an end to the lawlessness among the deputies."

Burgess Koessler, of Arnold, disclosed today that there has been trouble within the enclosures maintained by some of the coal companies.

"One union miner's home was bombarded with shots several nights ago, and I am informed a miner's wife was wounded," said Burgess Koessler. "Our report is that a deputy did the shooting."

PITTSBURGHER DIES IN CRASH

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 8—(AP.)—Murray Struwig, 22, and Joseph Switkin, 24, of Philadelphia were reported in a serious condition in a hospital here today as the result of injuries received yesterday when their automobile overturned near Hammonton, N. J., and killed Mrs. Pauline Switkin, 21, of Pittsburgh, sister-in-law of one of the injured men. Mildred War, 21, also of Philadelphia, was slightly injured.

Mrs. Switkin, whose neck was broken, was a guest of relatives in Philadelphia.

IGNORANT OF CAR MERGER HERE

Local officials of the Pressed Steel Car Company today said they had no knowledge of a possible merger of the company with the General American Tank Car Company, negotiations for which have been reported in New York. Control of the Pressed Steel Company, which has large plants here and in the middle west, is held by George J. Whelan, of New York, and his associates in the Universal Pipe and Radiator Company.

COP RESCUES MURDER SUSPECT FROM MOB

Safe from incensed residents of Montour, Roy Carter, Negro, murder suspect, of Bethel township, today was being held in the county jail. He was rescued Sunday from a mob of about 200 by Lieut. J. A. Ford, who held the crowd with a drawn revolver. Carter is alleged to have hacked to death Mrs. Laura Holyfield, 37, a Negress, of Montour.

TRIANGLE JURY "PACKED" SAY DOOMED

"BETTY" By FAITH BALDWIN

The Fascinating Love Story of a Girl of the Present Day

Betty Finds Her New Friend In a Quandary and Helps Him Out of Trouble

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Pretty black-haired Betty Warren goes on a pleasure trip with some friends, including Bob Stevenson. Betty lives with her mother and two sisters in Brooklyn and works as a typist in New York City. The girl and the young man leave before the others so that they can enjoy each other's company on the trip home from Coney Island. As the next day is a Sunday the whole Warren family assembles for dinner. Helen, the 16-year-old beauty of the family; Gladys, the artistic dreamer; Mrs. Warren, motherly and impractical, and finally, Betty's married sister, Virginia, with her little boy, Junior, and her husband, Jim, who was gassed in the war. Virginia is despondent about her husband's health. Betty is acquainted with a wealthy author, Anson Lorrimer, and Virginia urges her to try and attract him. The next day Lorrimer visits Betty's office with some typing he wants her to do. Betty is oblivious of his admiration. Bob asks Betty to marry him, and she accepts. Betty's brother-in-law becomes so ill that he must be sent to a western hospital. To Betty it means an indefinite postponement of her marriage to Bob. Betty and Bob have a trivial argument. Bob is very angry when he leaves her home. Lorrimer invites Betty out to lunch and she accepts. He offers to get her a better job. To add to her happiness, when she reaches home she finds Bob waiting for her, and they make up. Several nights later Lorrimer calls at Betty's home and meets Bob, who forms a dislike for him. After Lorrimer leaves Betty and Bob have another argument. Virginia overhears them and later in the night asks Betty to confide in her. Through Lorrimer Betty gets a job with an advertising agency and meets Harry Martin, an office man.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HARRY was too interested in his work to have much time for serious running around after girls. He was completely heart free. But he liked Betty at once and found many opportunites to talk to her. Once or twice he took her out to luncheon and on an occasion when Lorrimer asked her to come to a studio party at his place with the promise that she would leave early and be sent home in his car, Harry went along to the party also and was her thoughtful attendant all evening. She liked the party. It was neither too gay nor too dull. She met many people who amused her, among them Peter Lessways, Lorrimer's cousin, the handsomest and most inane man she had ever seen in her life and one of the most engaging.

The evening's dissipation did her good. It was the first of several. It took her out of herself, it made her forget—unhappiness. And Lorrimer was very careful about the parties he asked her on. They were by no means typical of his parties as Harry Martin observed to himself silently, and he always saw to it that Betty left at a reasonable hour in his car and was driven safely and quickly home—alone.

Lorrimer was playing the game well. He had Betty's confidence and gratitude and trust. He had made no misstep. He could rely on progress from now on. They had become, she thought, the best of sincerely interested, unsentimental friends—

He wondered if Martin would say anything to Betty of his, Lorrimer's, reputation. Martin did not. Martin figured to himself that Betty could look out after herself and furthermore Lorrimer's attitude toward her was all that anyone could desire.

And another influence was approaching to make Bob Stevenson restless and ill at east and unhappy and to further, perhaps, Lorrimer's case with Betty. A seasonal influence—the influence of spring.

CHAPTER XIV

AMBITION.

DESPITE the increase in her salary and her equally pleasant surroundings, Betty was not finding her work at the advertising firm as interesting to her personally as that at the Author's Agency. It was more or less routine work, and she had confessed to Lorrimer that it rather bored her. But one day, getting in the office early, she found Harry Martin the only occupant. The door of his small private office was open and many groans and snorts issuing therefrom. Betty poked her head cautiously around the door frame.

Martin was sitting at his strewn desk, literally tearing his thick blond thatch of hair. The face he lifted to her astonished gaze was so comical in its almost theatrical despair that she smothered a wild laugh.

"Why, Mr. Martin—what on earth are you doing down so early?" she asked.

Martin groaned:

"Down so early. Why I've been down all night!" he said.

"Never!"

"Practically—Oh, I left and had some dinner and came back . . . and here I've stuck ever since. God forgive me for ever going into this cut throat business," he prayed devoutly, "why didn't my mother bring me up to be a plumber—a nice, easy going, respectable plumber!"

"But what on earth is the matter?" Betty demanded.

He waved an inky hand at the papers strewn about him.

"It's that infernal Haskins account. If I don't make good on this ad we lose their next big order. Then it's out into the wide, wide world for little Willie. They're the funniest lot I know. Want their copy snappy but not sensational. Conservative, but catching! Can you beat that!"

"Yes—I mean no! But what's it all about?" she asked.

"Stockings! You women will wear them, you know," he answered and grinned his singularly ingratiating smile.

"May I look?"

"And welcome!"

She picked up some of the sheets that lay tossed around and read Harry's effort at being conservative, eye-catching, snappy and not sensational.

"It reads—this one—like a lecture," she commented, "and this one like—like a jazz band."

"I know. I did 'em both for a pur-

Rogers Silent on Sacco; Thinks Fuller Acted Conscientiously

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 7.—I haven't expressed an opinion on the Sacco-Vanzetti case because I don't know any more about it than the people that have expressed an opinion on it. A fool that knows he is a fool is one that knows he don't know all about anything.

The fool that don't know he is a fool is the one that thinks he knows all about anything. Then he is a damn fool. People are trying to tell you all that happened in a case that happened seven years ago when they couldn't tell you all that happened yesterday. Just ten weeks ago I spent an hour in Gov. Fuller's home discussing the case with him, and I do believe whatever he did, he conscientiously believed to be justice.

Yours,
MAYOR EMERITUS.

KIDNAPING IS CHARGED

Charging Albert Miller, 30, manager of the Mercer Hotel, Farrell, with having forced her out of her room and into an automobile at the point of a revolver, Jackeline Foster, 22, of Dauphin, had the man arrested early today here.

In Morals Court Miss Foster told Magistrate A. D. Brandon that last Wednesday night she went to the Mercer Hotel to stay. Last night, she testified, Miller entered her room and forced her to accompany him to his machine at the point of a revolver, telling her he was going to take her to Uniontown.

She said they started on their trip and although she made repeated attempts to escape, she always was forced to remain in the machine. When they reached here she summoned Patrolman John J. Riley, who arrested Miller. Miller denied the charges, telling the magistrate the girl had asked him for a lift. They were both held.

KILLED UNDER BOX CAR, HIS REFUGE FROM RAIN

The wheels of a box car in the Fifty-fourth street yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad, under which he had taken refuge from the heavy rainstorm yesterday, instantly killed Francis Fitzpatrick, 44, of 5130 Carnegie avenue, railroad police reported to the coroner. A shifting engine had moved the car.

TRIANGLE JURY 'PACKED,' SAY DOOMED

FRANKLIN, La., Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Defense counsel for Mrs. Ada LeBouef and Dr. Dreher were prepared today to fight for their clients' lives on the grounds that the jury which convicted them was "packed." Their counsel declared he had obtained affidavits that three jurors announced they would hang Mrs. LeBouef and Dr. Dreher. Counsel for James Beadle, given life imprisonment as the third member of the trio, convicted Saturday of the slaying of James LeBouef at Morgan City July 1, had made no statement of future action.

WOMAN COLLAPSES

Showing little emotion at the reading of the verdict that would send her to the gallows, Mrs. LeBouef finally has collapsed. Gone is the wan, expressionless mask worn in the courtroom.

Dr. Dreher has lost his cool impassiveness. He seems to have aged 10 years since he heard the jury tell him, in effect, that they did not believe his story that Beadle slew LeBouef after the victim shot first.

WORLD-CIRCLING FLIGHT PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Details of a new effort to break the round-the-world speed record were announced yesterday by Edward F. Schlee of Detroit, who is to finance a round-the-world flight in a Stinson monoplane and act as relief pilot for William S. Brock, air mail pilot. Today Schlee and Brock will go to Washington to make arrangements for a radio beacon to be established at Sand Island, one of the Midway Islands in the Pacific. The plane is the same one in which the maker, Eddy Stinson, won the Ford reliability tour. Schlee was Stinson's passenger on that tour.

Plane Contest Lures Scores of Boys

Scores of boys, fired to emulation by the air feats of "Lindy," Chamberlin and others, are making their own planes and have entered the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and Bureau of Recreation's National Aircraft Model contest.

With only a few weeks to build their model gliders and planes, preparatory to the playground, district, and city final tests, many are hurrying in the hope of capturing the big silver trophy that will go to the city champion. Of course, there will also be medals of gold and silver for the district champs, and silver and bronze buttons for those who cop the playground honors.

North Side boys, and those who live remote from any of the playground centers, and others who prefer may mail their entry blanks direct to the Aircraft Editor of the Sun-Telegraph. In the fiction section of this paper every day this week will be illustrative articles by an airplane expert.

Begin making your plane today, if you haven't already started!

Orville Wright, possibly the greatest designer of planes in the world, and one of the pioneers in the air game, is sharing honors with the famous "Lindy" as boss of the national contest. Prominent aces of the foreign and America air services in the city will be asked to be the judges at the Pittsburgh finals. The national judges, from the records of the Pittsburgh model tests, will determine if any Pittsburgh boys will appear in the national finals in Memphis, Tenn., October 8. There is a chance for 10 boys of Western Pennsylvania to go, if they are selected.

See the Fiction Section for instructions.

2,000 CRY 'SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI'

"Sacco and Vanzetti must not die." Two thousand people, crowded into Moose Temple Sunday afternoon, made this their rallying cry.

The meeting was held to protest the execution of the two men, set for the week of August 15. The assemblage adopted a resolution appealing to President Coolidge to intervene and to stay the carrying out of the death sentence. The resolution was telegraphed to the Black Hills.

"Sacco and Vanzetti are being framed because they are trades union men. Their trial was a farce."

These were assertions of the speakers and they drew rounds of applause. Dr. William J. Van Essen, who presided, called the two men "victims of post-war hysteria" and denounced the case as an "international infamy."

GERMAN FLIER DREADS SEPARATION FROM PIPE

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—There is only one hardship which Otto Koennecke dreads during his coming transatlantic flight—the necessity of refraining from smoking his pipe for more than 50 hours.

"I do not mind fasting," said Koennecke. "In fact, I am training myself to forego eating for stretches of two days at a time, and I do not mind staying awake 50 hours, which I often was compelled to do during the war. But it is a sad idea to think of not being able to draw at my pipe all this time."

WANTS POWERS TO LET CHINA WORK ALONE

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 8—(AP.)—Foreigners would hasten compromise among the factions in China by leaving them all alone, Prof. Harold S. Quigley, of the University of Minnesota and a member of the Chinese Social and Political Science Association, told the Institute of Politics today.

"It's time for foreign states to cease 'picking a winner,'" Prof. Quigley asserted. "Every winner picked, so far, from Yuan Shi-Kai to Wu Pei-Fu, has failed. No leader can succeed permanently without loyal Chinese supporters, and these he cannot hold if it is discovered that he is in foreign pay."

Sun Yat-Sen resented bitterly the foreign intervention that prevented his efforts to constitutionalize China, Prof. Quigley said. Nationalist sources are charging at least two powers with making or permitting loans to Chang Tso-Lin, their northern opponent, thus prolonging the struggle between factions.

CHURCH LAXITY SCORED HERE

Departing from the usual stereotyped Sunday morning sermon, Rev. A. C. McConnell, of Ellsworth, startled a congregation in the Oakland Presbyterian Church yesterday by declaring that laxity in church discipline and "neglect of the distinctly spiritual side of our religion" is responsible for the Protestant churches of America losing members at the rate of 500,000 a year. Mr. McConnell occupied the pulpit in the absence of Rev. Dr. George L. Glunt, pastor, who is on a vacation.

We have been too much impressed with God's promises to the church and too little impressed with the conditions upon which these promises are always given, Rev. McConnell said.

POPE DECORATES KING OF EGYPT IN AUDIENCE

ROME, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—An event extremely unusual in the modern history of the Roman Catholic church took place yesterday when King Faud of Egypt, accompanied by the Egyptian premier, the grand chamberlain and other dignitaries, was formally received by Pope Pius. The only similar example was the audience granted to the present Emperor of Japan. In the throne room, the pontiff invited King Faud to a seat next to him. The Pope then conferred on him the decoration of the Order of the Golden Spur.

10 ARRESTED IN STRIKE RIOT AT AVELLA MINE

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 8—Ten persons, including a mother and three sons, were arrested today following a fight between officers and a crowd of at least a hundred union miners and strike sympathizers near the Duquesne mine at Avella. All are held under $1,000 bond for a hearing Thursday.

FASHION GIRLS SEE ST. LOUIS PARKS

By ALPHILD LARSON,
Pittsburgh's Fashion Queen.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—Sunday can hardly be called a quiet day in St. Louis. We had more excitement and fun yesterday than all the rest of the week put together as we have been so busy with shows and rehearsals that we haven't had much of a chance for recreation or sight seeing.

At 2:30 o'clock yesterday a big sight-seeing bus called for us and our hostess, Mrs. W. B. Douglas, took us around the city. We saw the parks and interesting places and ended up at the Riverview Country club where we enjoyed the bathing. After we were through swimming we went into the club and played and sang and danced.

Everybody is friendly and there is no jealousy even among the bitterest rivals. Our plans for the week are uncertain, but many social affairs are being arranged.

AIR FIELD MAY BE ENLARGED

The enlargement of Rodgers Flying Field, Aspinwall, is virtually assured as the result of a recommendation made to county commissioners last Saturday by Capt. Thomas S. Voss, commandant of the field. Capt. Voss's recommendation was based upon the reports of an aerial survey conducted by nine pilots. In stressing the need for a larger field, he stated that Pittsburgh, off all army airways, has no commercial transportation line because of the smallness of its flying fields. The aerial survey was requested by the commissioners when members of City Council appealed for equal aid in acquiring a 42-acre tract adjoining the field on the south, which is owned by the county.

"See you tonight," Sally said to him. And then she forgot all about him. Read "Sally's Shoulders," starting next Monday in The Sun-Telegraph.

Miss Dorothy Burnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Burnett, of Raleigh street, has chosen Thursday, September 1, as the date for her marriage to Lloyd F. Hunt of Los Angeles.

The drama talk by Mrs. W. R. Spellmire will be given in conjunction with colored shadow pictures and pantomimes. An evening meeting on January 11 at which the husbands will be entertained will be made the occasion for this feature of the year's program. Mrs. F. W. Boland will contribute a book review and Mrs. C. A. Burke will conduct a round table on new books, at the December meeting. GIRL CHANGES PROVERB

The old proverb, by which many young women are charged with "making mole hills into mountains," has been transposed by Miss Sally Jerome, pretty 20-year-old young woman, who, critics declare, has the most unusual pair of shoulders ever seen on any young woman of 20. Miss Jerome actually has made, by the aid of these shoulders, "mountains into mole hills," which is a considerable feat. You will find how she did it next Monday in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, where "Sally's Shoulders," by Beatrice Burton, begins.

GREENSBURG IS HOST TO 15,000 FIREMEN

The city is decorated with flags and bunting and streets are illuminated. Fifteen thousand visitors are expected during the week. United States Senator David A. Reed, former Lieut. Gov. E. E. Beidleman and Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, of Philadelphia, are among the notables who will attend.

Among the features will be the civic and industrial parade Wednesday afternoon, the firemen's parade Thursday and the mummers' parade Friday night. A large historical pageant, with 1,000 participating, will be staged Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

THE DIAMOND DICTIONARY

PERFECT BLUE WHITE DIAMONDS—A phrase used to describe diamonds that are blue white in color, but may be imperfectly cut. This phrase means much when used by a reputable dealer who guarantees the diamond to be free from every imperfection; and so cut as to give the most in brilliancy and refraction. The phrase is often misused by the "gyp" diamond dealer for his own benefit.

Norma, however, will generally reduce high blood pressure. It should relieve you of the distressing symptoms and enable you to live and work in comfort. Often one bottle brings wonderful relief. Many have so testified. If you have high blood pressure, take Norma and give it a chance to help you. Get Norma today at May's Drug Stores, or any good drug store.—Advertisement.

Children Cry For

Fletcher's

CASTORIA

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

The Boys Counted Out the Giants Too Soon

Through the Sport Lens

By Havey Boyle

HAVEY BOYLE.

NO heavyweight champion has enjoyed the advantages held by Jack Dempsey. He arrived on the scene at the proper time, when purses for fistic affairs began to soar, when public feeling against boxing was softening away under the influence of legislative control, and when the woods were barren of dangerous giant timber.

Consider his position as challenger. Unlike most challengers who must kick their heels impatiently until the champion deigns to give them a chance, Dempsey is found now actually setting the date for his chance at the crown.

The strangeness of this is realized only when one tries to picture Willard or Tunney or Gibbons or Firpo stipulating just on what date they would meet the then champion, Dempsey. Jack would have told them to take a jump in the lake.

BUT here is Dempsey now saying that September 15 will not be entirely suitable, but that September 22 will be agreeable to him. This is almost absurd in the light of precedent. What Dempsey nominates the time the champion, Tunney, sits back apparently content to give the challenger the right of way.

If Tunney were the sort of the other champions who laughed at the preposterous [illegible] heavyweight [illegible] within a year he would say "I'm the one to be pursued about this date. Dempsey may be considered the drawing card but I'm the champion—don't lose sight of that fact."

But Tunney, confident he can defeat Dempsey in the latter part of any month as well as in the middle of any month, allows Dempsey to pass up September 15 for September 22.

IN TAKING this attitude Tunney as usual gets little credit from a public that has grown cold toward him in the short space of a year. Tunney has stains on his pugilistic soul, perhaps, but he compares favorably with any of the men who in his position enjoyed greater popularity, heard louder acclaim.

TUNNEY encountered hostility when, after having won the title, he pointed out to boxing critics that they had been quite wrong in picking Dempsey. He said truthfully enough that, because the experts were wrong they told how bad Dempsey was instead of saying how good Tunney was on the night of the fight.

Here Tunney made a serious error. One's mortification is bad enough when a major error is committed, but to be forced to hear about the error from a superior wit is gall and wormwood.

People don't like to be told they are wrong. Socrates found that out. That old boy was so concrete that the mob became suspicious of him and finally gave him poison.

The boys haven't given Tunney hemlock exactly, but they have given him the raspberry, which, if not fatal, is distasteful.

IN CHICAGO, scene of the coming title bout, a boxing promoter, Jim Mullens, mysteriously disappears. He is heard from later. Now a disappearance or two before the big fight comes off may prove to be minor news. It would not surprise the boys to see a little shooting before the thing is over. In Chicago they say things with flowers—and bullets.

A SECTION of New York is still peevish over Rickard's Chicago venture. These complainants set forth that Rickard owes his being as a boxing man to New York. The generous patronage afforded him by the fans of New York is pointed out. One gets the idea that fans in New York went to boxing shows, not to be entertained, but to do the nice thing by Rickard. This, of course, is not true.

New York fans are of the same texture as fans of other places. They went to the good shows Rickard offered, and stayed away from bad ones.

Anyway, I suspect the fans themselves are not so worked up about the loss of the bout as are their spokesmen among the hotel and restaurant men who possibly don't go to the bouts at all.

S. G. A., who will be in charge of the affair.

"Remember, it was the public linksmen who brought honor to their city as well as themselves, and we want to keep within the public links. There will be music and a real dinner. It is expected that the folk who play at Schenley Park will turn out en masse for the affair. It will be held on our spacious porch. Only a nominal charge will be made to cover expenses."

Burke said this morning that, while the date had not been definitely decided upon, he thought that nothing would turn up to prevent its being held Thursday night.

County Commissioner E. V. Tex Expects Record Gate

By WARREN BROWN

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Ticket reservations for the Dempsey-Tunney fight have already passed the $1,000,000 mark, to reach a point in excess of the total receipts of the recent Dempsey-Sharkey contest, was the announcement of G. L. (Tex) Rickard, upon his arrival here yesterday, for a conference with his ticket men.

Along with this announcement, Rickard issued what might be termed a warning to prospective Chicago ticket buyers.

"These reservations," he said, "represent for the most part, cities and towns throughout the country, and apart from Chicago. I would urge that the people here do not wait too long to file their reservations, if they do not want to run the risk of being shut out from desirable seats. I am willing to bet now that there will not be a ticket left for sale 10 days in advance of the bout, and the receipts will certainly go beyond the $2,000,000 mark, and set what may be a record that will stand for all time."

Rickard has decided to scale his "house" at the following prices, $40, $30, $25, $20, $15, $10 and $5.

TICKET OFFICE OPENED.

While ticket distribution will not be possible for a matter of 10 days or two weeks, Rickard has already established headquarters in the Congress Hotel for reservations, and a regulation ticket office will be selected immediately. The handling of the tickets, Rickard said, will be entirely in charge of a committee of three, to be appointed by George Getz, and his associates, who made possible the coming of Rickard to Chicago.

Of the fight itself, Rickard had the important announcement to make that Dempsey has decided to do all his training in private, with only the newspaper men allowed to watch the proceedings.

"He wired me that decision a few days ago," Rickard said, "and I am entirely in accord with that view."

Rickard expressed kindly views towards the proposition that Dempsey do his training at the racing plant of the Lincoln Fields Jockey Club, at Crete. When the desirability of that location was presented to him, Rickard said that he would urge Leo P. Flynn, Dempsey's manager, to close for the site at once.

"I know that Dempsey wants to train within an hour's ride of Chicago," he said. "His wife intends to remain here during the training period."

TRY, TRY AGAIN!

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor

CARL F. KAUFFMANN is the new national champion of public links golfers, adding to Pittsburgh's great list of leaders in the various branches of sport through the years.

He won the title at Cleveland last Saturday in a bitterly-contested match with William F. Serrick of New York on the thirty-seventh green.

His manner of winning overshadowed the mere fact that he won. It demonstrated that he is a real champion at heart.

FOR consider:

Last year Kauffmann fought his way through to the final round of the competition at Buffalo and then failed with his goal in sight.

This year he again made the final round, and had before him the spectre of his previous collapse.

He got off to a heart-breaking start against Serrick Saturday, losing the first three holes, although he shot 4-5-5. His opponent came through with an eagle 2 on the first hole and followed with 4-4. Then Kauffmann matched stroke for stroke with Serrick for the remainder of the first nine holes and found himself 3 down at the turn.

Carl then won three of the first four incoming holes and squared the match on the thirteenth, only to lose the next three in succession and find himself 3 down again.

Any golfer lacking the greatest requisite of a champion would have cracked in the face of such ill luck, but Kauffmann merely became more grimly determined and plugged away to win the next two holes and finish the first round only 1 down.

BEGINNING the afternoon round, Kauffmann again evened matters by winning the first hole in 3-5, halved the next in 4 and for the first time went into the lead on the twenty-first hole, with a 3 against a 5. He lost the next hole and then took three in a row to become 3 up, equaling his opponent's largest lead over him. He squared the next hole and lost the twenty-seventh, finishing the third nine 2 up.

On the final nine he halved the first hole and then lost three in a row and found himself 1 down with only five to go. He won the next one, squaring the match, and the last four holes were halved, necessitating the playing off of the tie.

The break came on the first extra hole, which Kauffmann won, 4-5. In the tensest and most dramatic moments of the match in which all the luck appeared to be against him, he managed to "out-heart" and outsteady his rival, who also was playing for the second time as a finalist in the event.

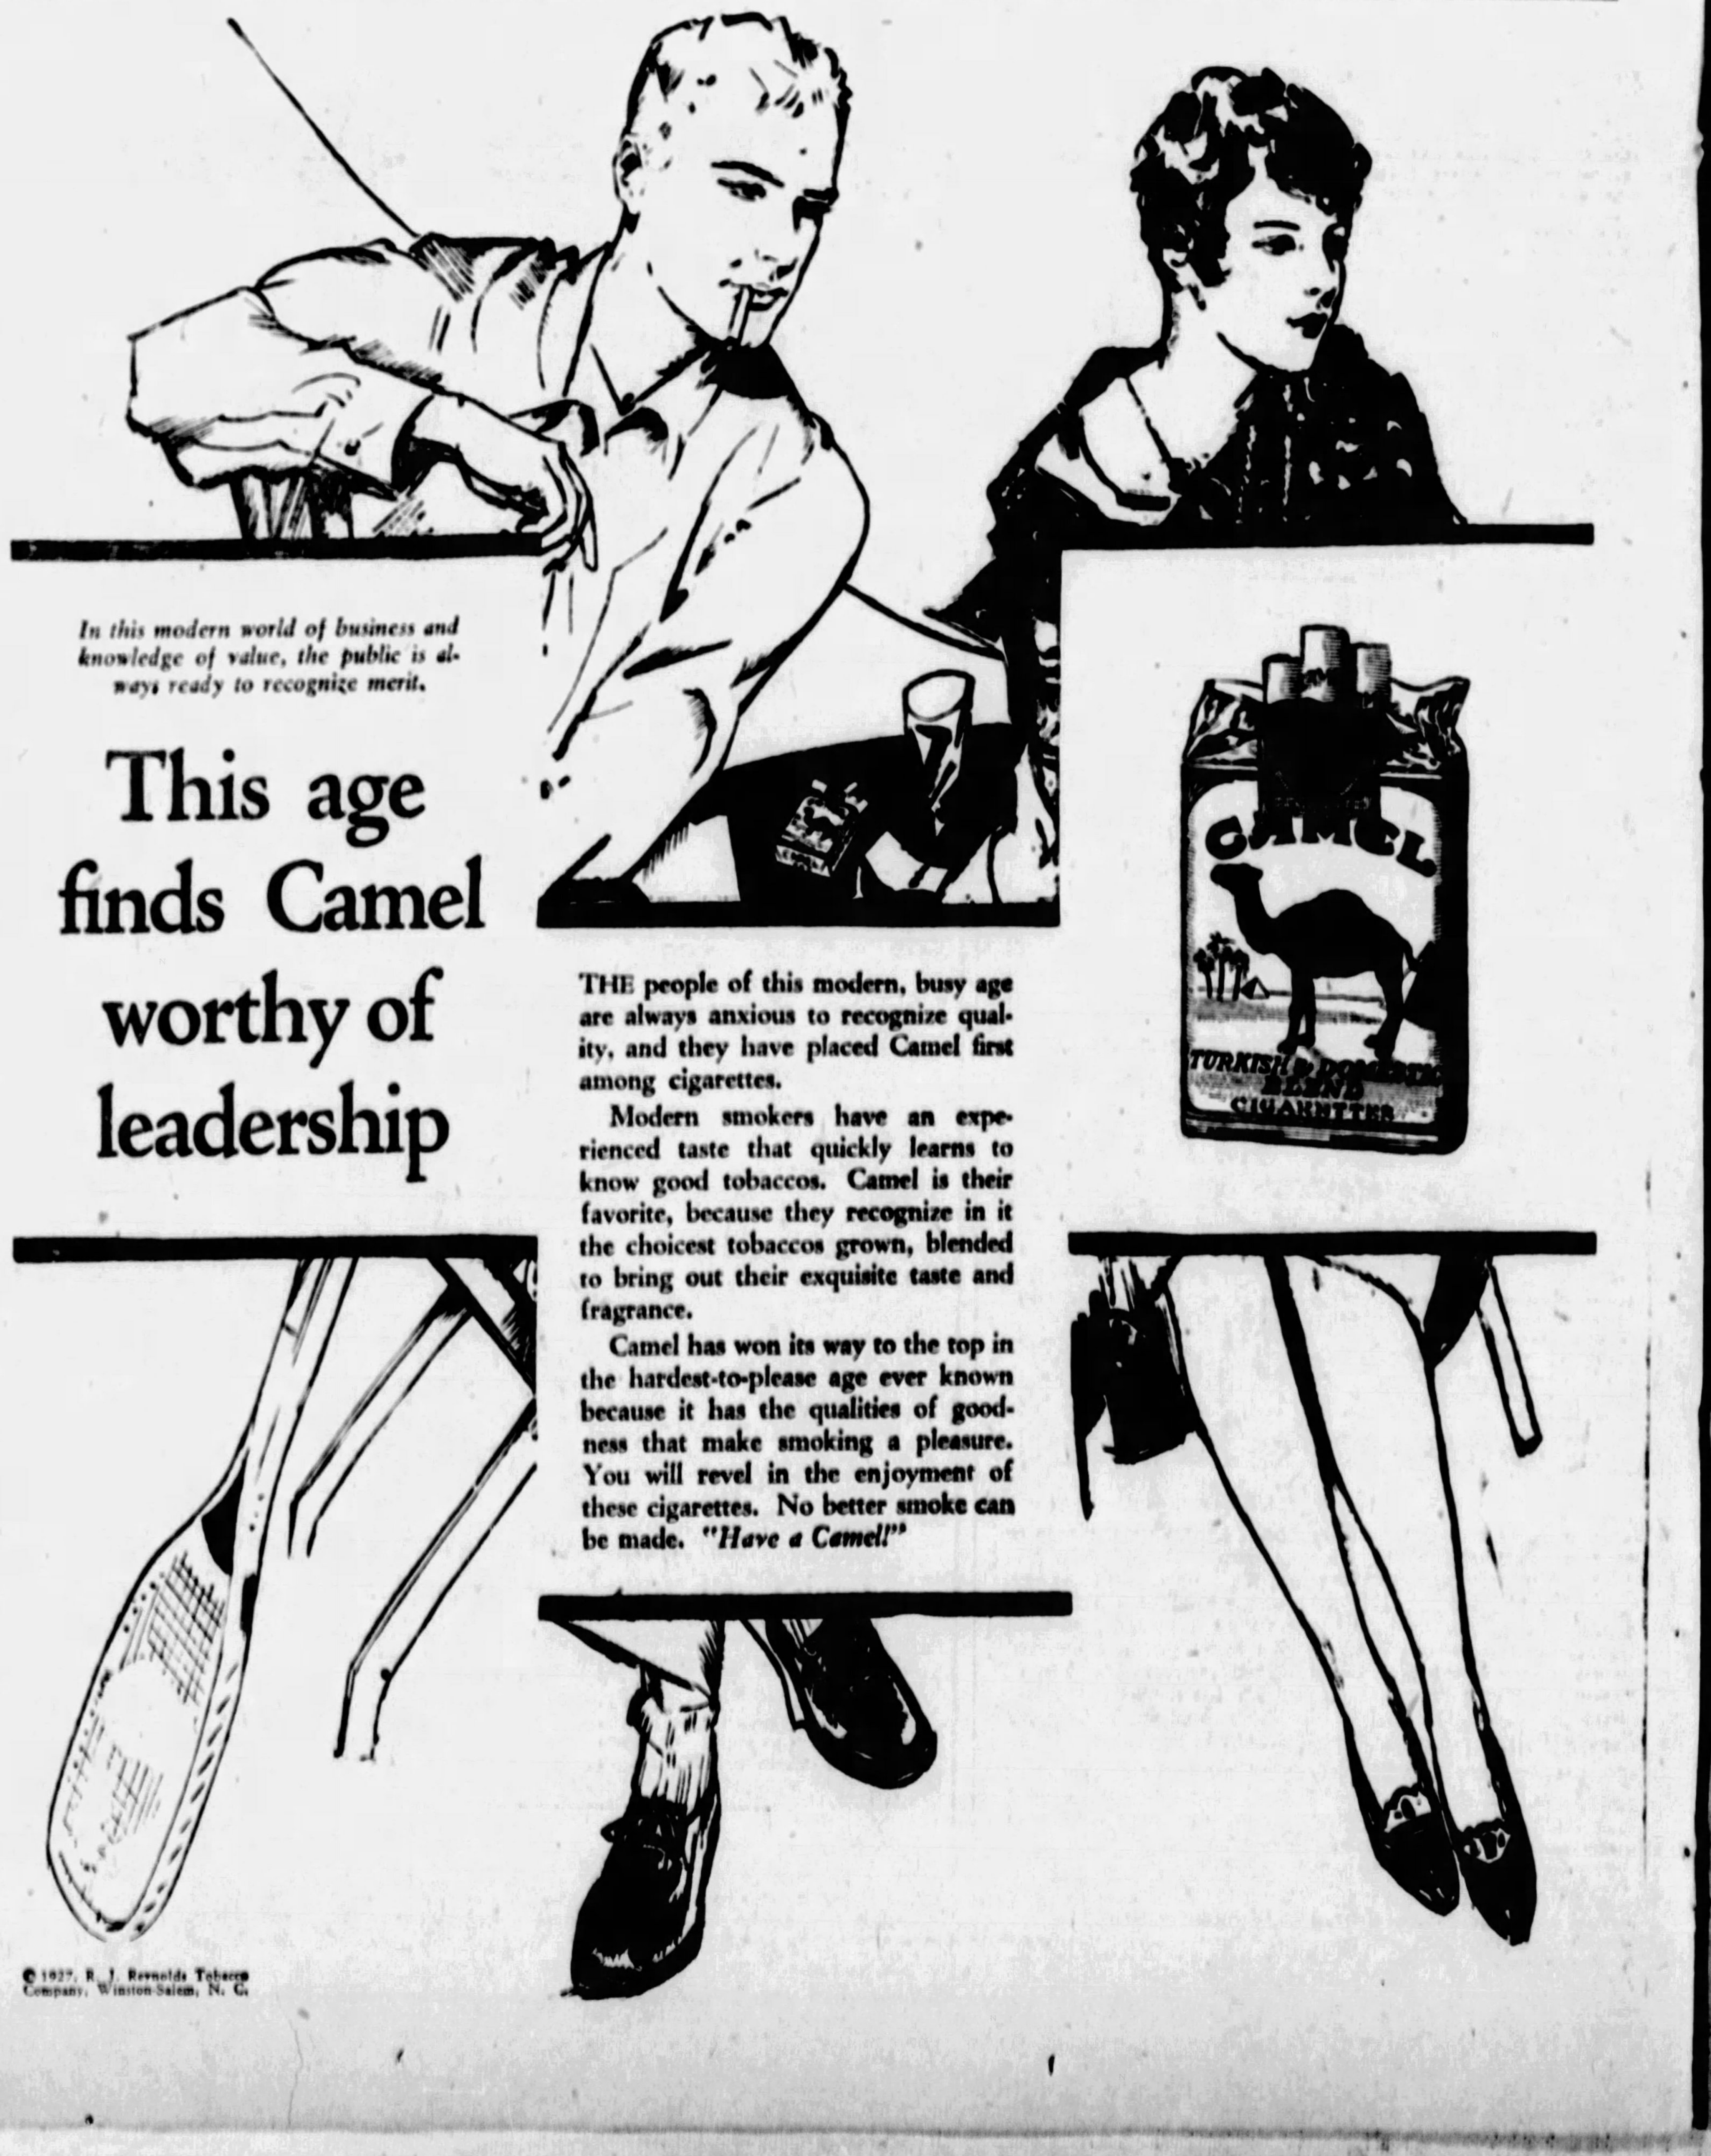
NO CHAMPION ever more fully deserved his laurels than Kauffmann, as the review of his match proves. His winning battle against almost overwhelming bad breaks demonstrates the value of stick-to-it-iveness when discouraging factors are greatest. He succeeded where he failed last year and proved to himself and the world that victory can be clutched from defeat if one only will try, try again. And foreverlastingly keep on TRYING.



In this modern world of business and knowledge of value, the public is always ready to recognize merit.

This age finds Camel worthy of leadership

THE people of this modern, busy age are always anxious to recognize quality, and they have placed Camel first among cigarettes.

Camel has won its way to the top in the hardest-to-please age ever known because it has the qualities of goodness that make smoking a pleasure. You will revel in the enjoyment of these cigarettes. No better smoke can be made. "Have a Camel!"

Kauffmann May Turn Professional

SPORTS COMMENT

By James J. Long

FATHER PITT'S entry in the National League pennant stakes is showing a complete reversal of form and change of habits as compared with its performances of recent years.

It has been the custom of the Pirates to make a poor start, flounder around in the neighborhood of the .500 mark until about midseason and then begin a mad drive that made them look like champions through August and September. In 1925 they were actually on top at the finish, and in several other years they gave rival contenders plenty to worry about by their steady advances in the late stages of the flag competition.

BUT this year everything has been different. Instead of handicaping themselves by making a limping start, the Bucs got off on the right foot, tore through all opponents in the early battling, and, by reason of their best beginning in many seasons, forced critics everywhere to concede that if they only lived up to their old reputation for fast going after passing the midway mark there would be nothing to the outcome but another pennant for one of the big steel poles at Forbes Field.

UNHAPPILY, however, things have not panned out that way. Just as they reversed themselves at the start, the Corsairs have again reversed themselves since the contending field swept past the Fourth of July turning point. Instead of making their former midseason gains, they have slipped and skidded to such an extent that all of their early advantages have been wiped out and they have been limping along for weeks at a mere fifty-fifty gait.

The only thing that saved them from slipping even farther below the pinnacle that they formerly occupied was that their main rivals, the Cubs, also had an off-spell about the same time. But the Bruins did not slump as badly as the locals, and meanwhile other clubs advanced at such a rate that the Bushmen, in addition to losing the leadership, soon may find themselves very closely pressed from behind.

LOOK back over the happenings since the Pirates left Brooklyn on their second Eastern trip last month. The Forbes Field ballers show a balance on the wrong side of the book, having lost 11 of their last 21 games. In the same period the Cubs, who also slumped, but recovered, have won 11 out of 21, and meanwhile the Giants have won 14 out of 21, the Cards have captured 11 out of 20 and the Reds have bagged 15 out of 21.

There can be only one answer to that sort of thing. Cold figures show that for more than three weeks the Pittsburgh club has been outplayed by four others. The team that shapes up as the best in the league when normal has not been able to hold its own with a supposedly inferior quartet at a very important stage of the pennant hostilities.

CONTINUANCE of that gait could not carry the Picaroons in any direction except downward. here must be a change for the better and it must come immediately. The Bucs are still in the hunt, it is true, and the distance to the top is comparatively slight, but that gap, narrow as it is, cannot be bridged by .500 ball.

There are one or two men on the club who are capable of playing vastly better ball than they have been producing, and it is high time for them to come through with it.

Alibis based on injuries that should have mended long ago are out of order now. The Pirates can and must play better ball, and Manager Bush will be justified in doing a little whip-cracking if better results are not forthcoming immediately.

ONE unusual feature of the Pittsburgh club's record is that the Rovers have not succeeded in doing any better at home than on the road. Though a good ball team can win games no matter where they are played, even a champion outfit is supposed to have some advantage while playing on its own lot, yet that has not applied to the case of the Freebooters as far as may be judged from the records.

Despite the unwavering support of the most loyal fan army in Balldom, the Bushmen have not been able to turn their home engagements to good account. They have made exactly the same record at Forbes Field as on the road.

UP to date, the Picaroons have played the same number of games at home as abroad. Not counting one tie staged in Boston, the local club has cleaned 102 games off its season's schedule, and these have been divided equally between Forbes Field and foreign battle grounds, 51 here and the same number away from home. On each side of the table, Bush's ballers have the same record. At home they have won 30 games and lost 21, and their showing on alien loam has been an exact duplicate.

It isn't often that you hear of a ball club being near to first place with two-thirds of the season gone when it hasn't won a single game more at home than on the road. If the Bucs had played as well at home as they should have done, or as well as their good showing on the road warranted the fans in expecting, they would be out in front now by a comfortable margin.

CHICK EVANS CAPTURES AMATEUR DRIVING CUP

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Charles (Chick) Evans, who once held more golf titles than even Bobby Jones, today has another laurel for his fairway prowess. He won the third annual amateur driving contest at Soldier Field yesterday with a total of 524 yards for two drives. His first attempt was 257 yards and on his second he added 10 more.

in to the bench and was taken to task by Manager Bush.

"That was a fine stunt you pulled," said Donie.

FINE DESERVED—BUSH

"What do you mean, fine stunt?" came back our Kiki.

"Fifty dollars fine," said Donie, and walked away.

When interviewed regarding the matter today, Manager Bush said that he "certainly had fined Cuyler," and added that "he deserved it."

In defending his action, Cuyler said that he did not slide because he figured he was a certain out and that if he remained on his feet he might offer enough interference to prevent a double play.

GAME CALLED OFF.

The second game of the Pittsburgh-New York series, scheduled at Forbes Field this afternoon, was called off on account of wet grounds. It will be played as part of a double-header September 22.

Manager Donie Bush had intended using Lee Meadows on the mound against the McGrawmen and likely will stand pat on his selection when the two teams resume their series tomorrow.

Burleigh Grimes, spitballer of the Giants, was ready to face the Pirates this afternoon and probably will be the New York choice tomorrow.

The Pirates, idle yesterday while the Cubs were defeating the Dodgers, now are three and one-half games behind the National League leaders.

NOT AFTER CISSELL.

Reports reaching Pittsburgh today that the Pittsburgh Baseball Club was negotiating for Chalmer Cissell, star shortstop of the Portland (Ore.) club of the Pacific Coast League, met with vigorous denials at Pirate headquarters.

The rumors said that the local club was bidding against the Athletics and Yankees for the youngster's services, but the Buccaneer bosses denied it emphatically.

"There is absolutely no truth in the report," Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss said. "We are not after Cissell and have no intention of bidding for him."

FREE LINKS CHAMPION TO BE FETED

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER

CARL F. Kauffmann, newly crowned national public links champion, is likely to turn professional—but he won't take any old kind of a job, and he doesn't know when he's going to quit the amateur ranks. He has not been approached. That much was learned from the star this morning. Further, if he remains an amateur that long, he has not yet decided whether he will play in the national amateur championship, which is to be held at Minneapolis the latter part of this month.

Carl Kauffmann.

"Now that your dream has come true," we asked Carl, "what are you going to do—got an idea you'd like to turn professional?"

"Well, I'd like to be a professional," he answered, "but I'm not going to leave my job for any old thing—there must be a real inducement before I quit the amateurs.

"Am I going to Minikahda? Well, that's rather vague, too. Don't know whether I can get away from work to go, and even if I do I can't say as I'd like to go by myself; in the event that I do decide to go, it will be because I can get away from the office and that my good friend Bill Serrick decides to go along. Anyway, I've got a week to think it over."

Carl did not work yesterday, and rested up.

In keeping with the sentiment of the public links, a testimonial to the boys who made such a glorious show-

The Beltzhoover outfit was stopped by the Bellevue nine Saturday night in an important Allegheny County League clash, but the boys from the hill retained their lead in the second half pennant race. In the other Saturday contests the McKeesport nine triumphed over the Traders and the Stowe Independents nosed out the fading Pitcairn outfit.

All of the clubs are bunched and this week's games will likely see several changes in the standing when the following Sunday rolls around. Tomorrow night the Beltzhoover nine will invade Pitcairn, McKeesport will appear at Dormont; Traders at Homewood and the Stowe club at Bellevue.

Hank Daly's Homewood outfit, which is making a valiant effort to land the flag in the second half chase, will have an opportunity of gaining on the leaders next Saturday afternoon when a double-header is played at the playgrounds against the Pitcairn nine.

pose. I wanted to [illegible] a snappy medium."

Sounds in the outer office betokened that the day's work was beginning. Betty fled with a laughing word of encouragement.

Typing memoranda and reports and recording various routine matters she found her mind dwelling more and more on Harry's dilemma, on the difficult stocking ad.

Toward noon an idea seized her. It was based on the [illegible] resting [illegible] wears them.

Seizing a yellow pad she scribbled a few words, crossed them out, rescribbled, frowned, scribbled again. So interested did she become in the problem that she almost forgot to go to lunch and when she did, had only time to patronize the sandwich and soda counter downstairs, where she ordered, sensibly, a cup of soup and a sandwich of sorts and sat there at the high counter scowling at the pad she still held. Finally she smiled, as with a certain air of triumph she wrote another sentence in a bold black hand.

She had the feeling suddenly that someone's eyes were fixed upon her intently and her own gaze lifted from the paper and pencil to encounter the gray glance of Harry, down at the corner of the marble counter. He grinned at her and waved a segment of ham and bread in greeting and a moment later, having miraculously bolted this, he paid his check, slid off the stool and came around to her.

"Are you writing a love letter or poetry?"

Betty blushed a little and hid the pad.

"Nothing like that. Your old stocking ad—I couldn't seem to get away from it."

"All contributions gratefully received," he vowed and held out his hand. "Let me see, do!"

"No—you'll laugh at me."

"Never. But I hope I haven't been the one to innoculate you with the virulent bug of copy writing. I'd hate to turn your pretty hair gray and otherwise wreck a promising young life."

Betty paid her check, ignoring Harry's protests, and rose.

"Perhaps you have—it—it's sort of exciting," she confessed.

"Exciting! Ye gods—after my sleepless night. Have a heart, call it exhausting instead, can't you?"

They went out into the great main hall together and once there he literally backed her up against the wall and stood before her in a menacing attitude.

"Your copy or your life!"

"Very well!"

Laughingly, reluctantly she handed him the yellow pad.

"But you'll never be able to make it out!"

"It does look like crow's feet and hen's tracks," he acknowledged, puzzling over the criss-crossed sheet. But here and there a sentence that had escaped the drifting pencil stood out black and clear. Harry whistled.

"By Jove, [illegible] I think you've hit it—you've certainly given me a lead. Look here, can you stay over tonight and go to dinner with me somewhere quietly? I'll see that you get home—and early. I'd like to talk this over with you. The Haskins account means a lot to the firm—and to me, you know. Please, please be a good sport, won't you?"

"Gladly," she agreed, "but now let me get back to my desk."

Later, after closing time, she telephoned home and told Virginia she was staying out to dinner. Virginia was curious.

"Mr. Lorrimer, I suppose?"

"No—Harry Martin here in the office. You needn't laugh that way, Vee, [illegible] it's really business, honest and truly."

Harry waited for her downstairs and the two of them went out in the clear cold air of early spring.

"Let's go to the Cedar Street Chop House," he suggested suddenly. "It's not so awfully far off and—have you ever been there?"

"No—"

"You'll like it."

They arrived eventually at the ancient house in the narrow street and very soon Betty was sitting on the pew-like bench before the long table feeling rather as if she were in a stall. The floor under her feet was sanded and before her eyes a white-aproned chef proceeded to perform mystic rites on the great open range.

The dingy walls were covered with old prints and the whole place had an air of long-ago about it which delighted her.

Dinner was perfection and included quail cooked before her eyes after she had hesitated doubtfully over Harry's suggestion of red head duck, "with the blood following the knife." She decided she didn't want that at all and took the succulent quail instead.

Building and Flying Model Airplanes

By PAUL EDWARD GARBER,
In Charge of Aeronautics, Smithsonian Institution.

Making the Wings

Now that our model airplane has its frame, propellor and rubber motor, it must be fitted with wings.

Inasmuch as the wing supports most of the weight of the model when in flight, it should be made to embody the utmost efficiency; it should be light and strong, and must be made true so that the model will fly straight.

The following materials are required:

Two pine sticks, 21x¼x1-16 in.

Thirty-six inches of No. 16 aluminum wire.

One-quarter yard china silk or thin paper.

Thread, needle and pins.

Glue and wing solution.

To commence construction, smooth the two sticks with sandpaper, and find the center of each. Make marks outward from center three inches apart, and cut a slight recess in the end of each stick as shown in the detail drawing marked "wing tip."

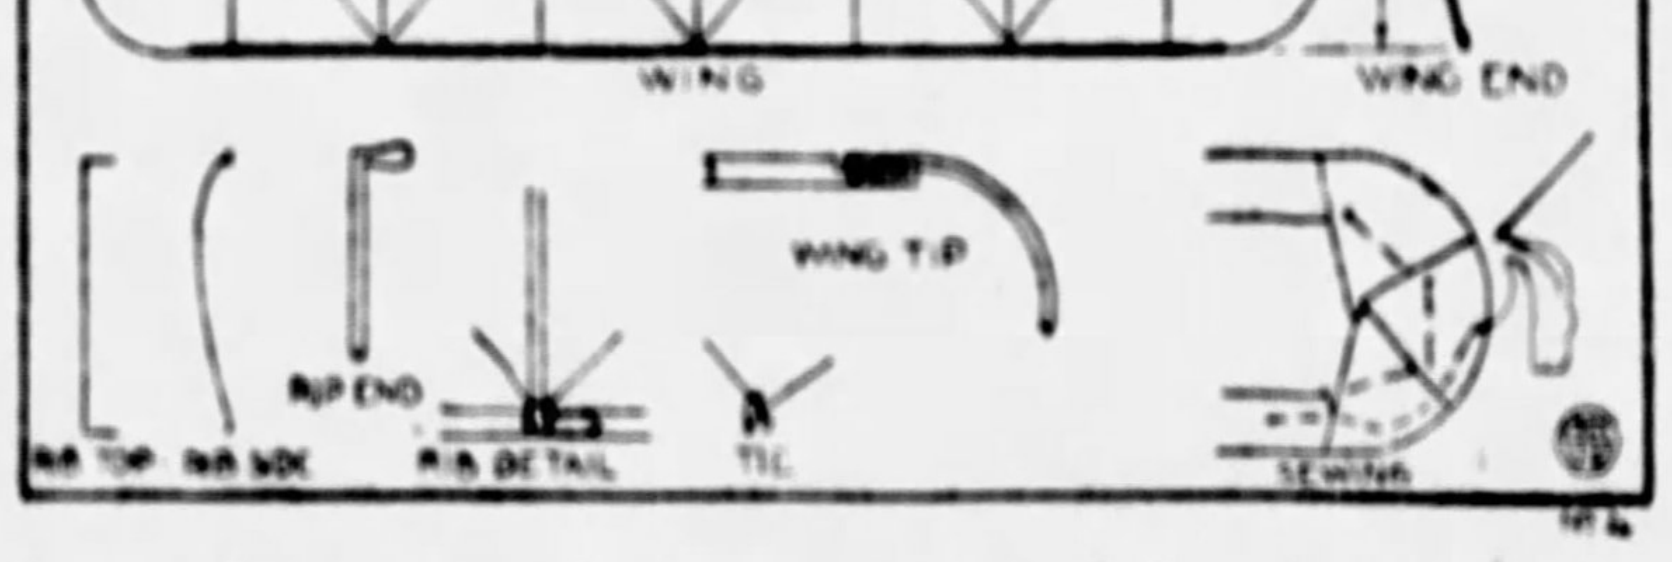
Next take the wire, which should be No. 16 aluminum, but if this cannot be obtained other light wire slightly smaller in diameter than a pencil lead will do. From the wire cut seven pieces, four inches long for the ribs. Cut the remainder in half and from each piece form two semi-circles, with extended ends. The radius of the semi-circles is to be 1¾ inch. These are the wing tips.

BIND RIBS

Take each rib, and bend ends at right angles, for a distance of ¼ of an inch as shown in the detail drawing, "rib top." Each of the ribs thus formed is to be again bent into a curved shape as shown in the detail drawing, "rib side." It will be noticed that this curve is somewhat like a parabola. It is the correct shape for securing lift from the wing. These must all be alike. The end of each rib is to be slightly flattened as shown in the detail drawing "rib end," to facilitate binding it to the sticks. This flattening can be easily done by holding the rib on a piece of iron and hitting the tip with a hammer.

The next step is to bind each rib onto the sticks at the points marked. The greatest curve of the rib must be in front. When this ladder-like frame is completed it should be strengthened against lateral play by running a thread diagonally from rib to rib as shown in the plan drawing of the wing. The detail drawings "rib detail" and "tie" illustrate how the thread is tied about each rib and carried on to the next. While making these ties be sure that each thread is tight and that the ribs are kept at right angles with the sticks. The next move consists in tieing on the wing tips. This is done as shown in the detail drawing "wing tips."

This completes the frame. It must next be covered. This can be done with either silk or paper. If the latter is used a piece slightly larger over all than the frame is secured. The center sections of the frame are covered with glue and the paper applied, making sure that it is drawn tightly leaving no wrinkles. Each succeeding frame is covered and when the tips are reached the paper is folded over them and trimmed with a slight margin, which is glued to the under surface near the tip wire. The tendency in stretching the paper should be to pull it laterally rather than from edge to edge, so as to preserve the curve of the wing.



OR APPLY SILK

If silk is used it is applied in the same way, but the ends can be made neater if they are sewed as in the detail drawing "sewing," which shows the cloth at the end folded over and pinned, after which a plain stitch is taken close to the wire, and finally the excess cloth is cut off.

Cloth must be painted with some solution to make it air tight. The solution may be collodion, which is sold at drug stores, or it may be a solution composed of celluloid dissolved in banana oil. A piece of celluloid can usually be found about the house in the form of an old comb or brush back, tray, etc. Banana oil is sold at paint and art stores. Celluloid is put in the oil until no more can be dissolved, after which the solution is ready to be applied. It should be brushed on thinly. If the constructor has access to a flying field he could procure some regular airplane wing solution, known familiarly as "dope." This makes an ideal model wing solution, especially if thinned with acetone, a drug store product.

After covering, the wing should be laid on a flat surface, to insure its remaining true while the rest of the model is completed.

Tomorrow we will take up the construction of the elevator or smaller wing, after which the model will be finished and ready for flying.

WEE JIMMY came hurrying into the house as fast as his fat legs would carry him, eager to tell his mother all about the great sight he had seen, certain that she would laugh and he would laugh and then they would tell each other how funny it all was and laugh again.

She was a laughing sort of mother, good at the greatest jokes, as quick could be to pick him up and hug him when he fell and skinned his knee again.

He was always hurting that knee. He wondered how long his knees would last if he fell down every day, but decided not to try it even for the sake of the experiment, because it hurt, in spite of the hug and the kisses that his mother gave him.

He hurried into the house calling his mother, trying, first of all, the kitchen, in the hope that she might be making cookies and would offer him a hot one with sugar on top. She wasn't in the kitchen, so he tried the big old-fashioned pantry, but she wasn't there, nor out on the back porch. He stayed quite a while in the pantry, to make sure that his mother was not there, as well as to make sure that the cooky jar was not really empty.

Then he went on into the dining room, calling lustily all the time. Where on earth could she be! She wasn't in the living room or the sun parlor, he knew, because he not only looked there, but stood and called and called.

He decided to try Daddy's den. He pushed and pushed and turned and twisted the knob and at last the door opened with a little squeak and he found himself in the small room that smelled of tobacco and held so many books and had guns and swords and things like that hanging on the wall. He must find his mother and tell her about what he had seen just a little while ago so that they might laugh together.

The stairs were long and hard, but he started up them manfully pausing to rest and to call at every few steps. Of course, his mother must be in her own room with the door shut and unable to hear him calling. But no, she was not, and the door was open. He looked in her big closet, but she wasn't there hanging up anything.

Half-heartedly he went hunting in his own little room that used to be the nursery before he got to be such a big boy. She just wasn't anywhere. Maybe he wouldn't ever find her in all the wide world and he'd be just like that little boy on the corner who hadn't any mother because she'd gone to heaven.

The tears began to fall in spite of a plucky attempt to check them and he felt very miserable as he started up the attic stairs in his search. The stairs were very straight up and down and it was almost impossible to climb them with such fat legs, but managed it by puffing, only to find that the big dusty place was entirely deserted, except for a squirrel that had stopped to look in at the window.

The silence was more than wee Jimmy could stand and he bolted down the steep stairs as fast as he could go, almost tumbled down the main staircase and found himself, before he knew it on the porch, with tears rolling down his cheeks, and a lonesome ache in his little heart.

With stumbling feet he rushed over to the house next door, where he knew he should find a sympathetic aunt, and flung himself against the doorbell to ring until somebody came. And then, miracle of miracles! His own mother came up the steps behind him and he threw himself into her arms with wild sobs.

"I was down in the cellar getting some jelly," his mother explained with another hug. "And I saw you run over here. Tell mother what you wanted to say so much to her."

"Why—why," wee Jimmy stammered. "Why, mudder, I have forgotted!"

Picnic Supper

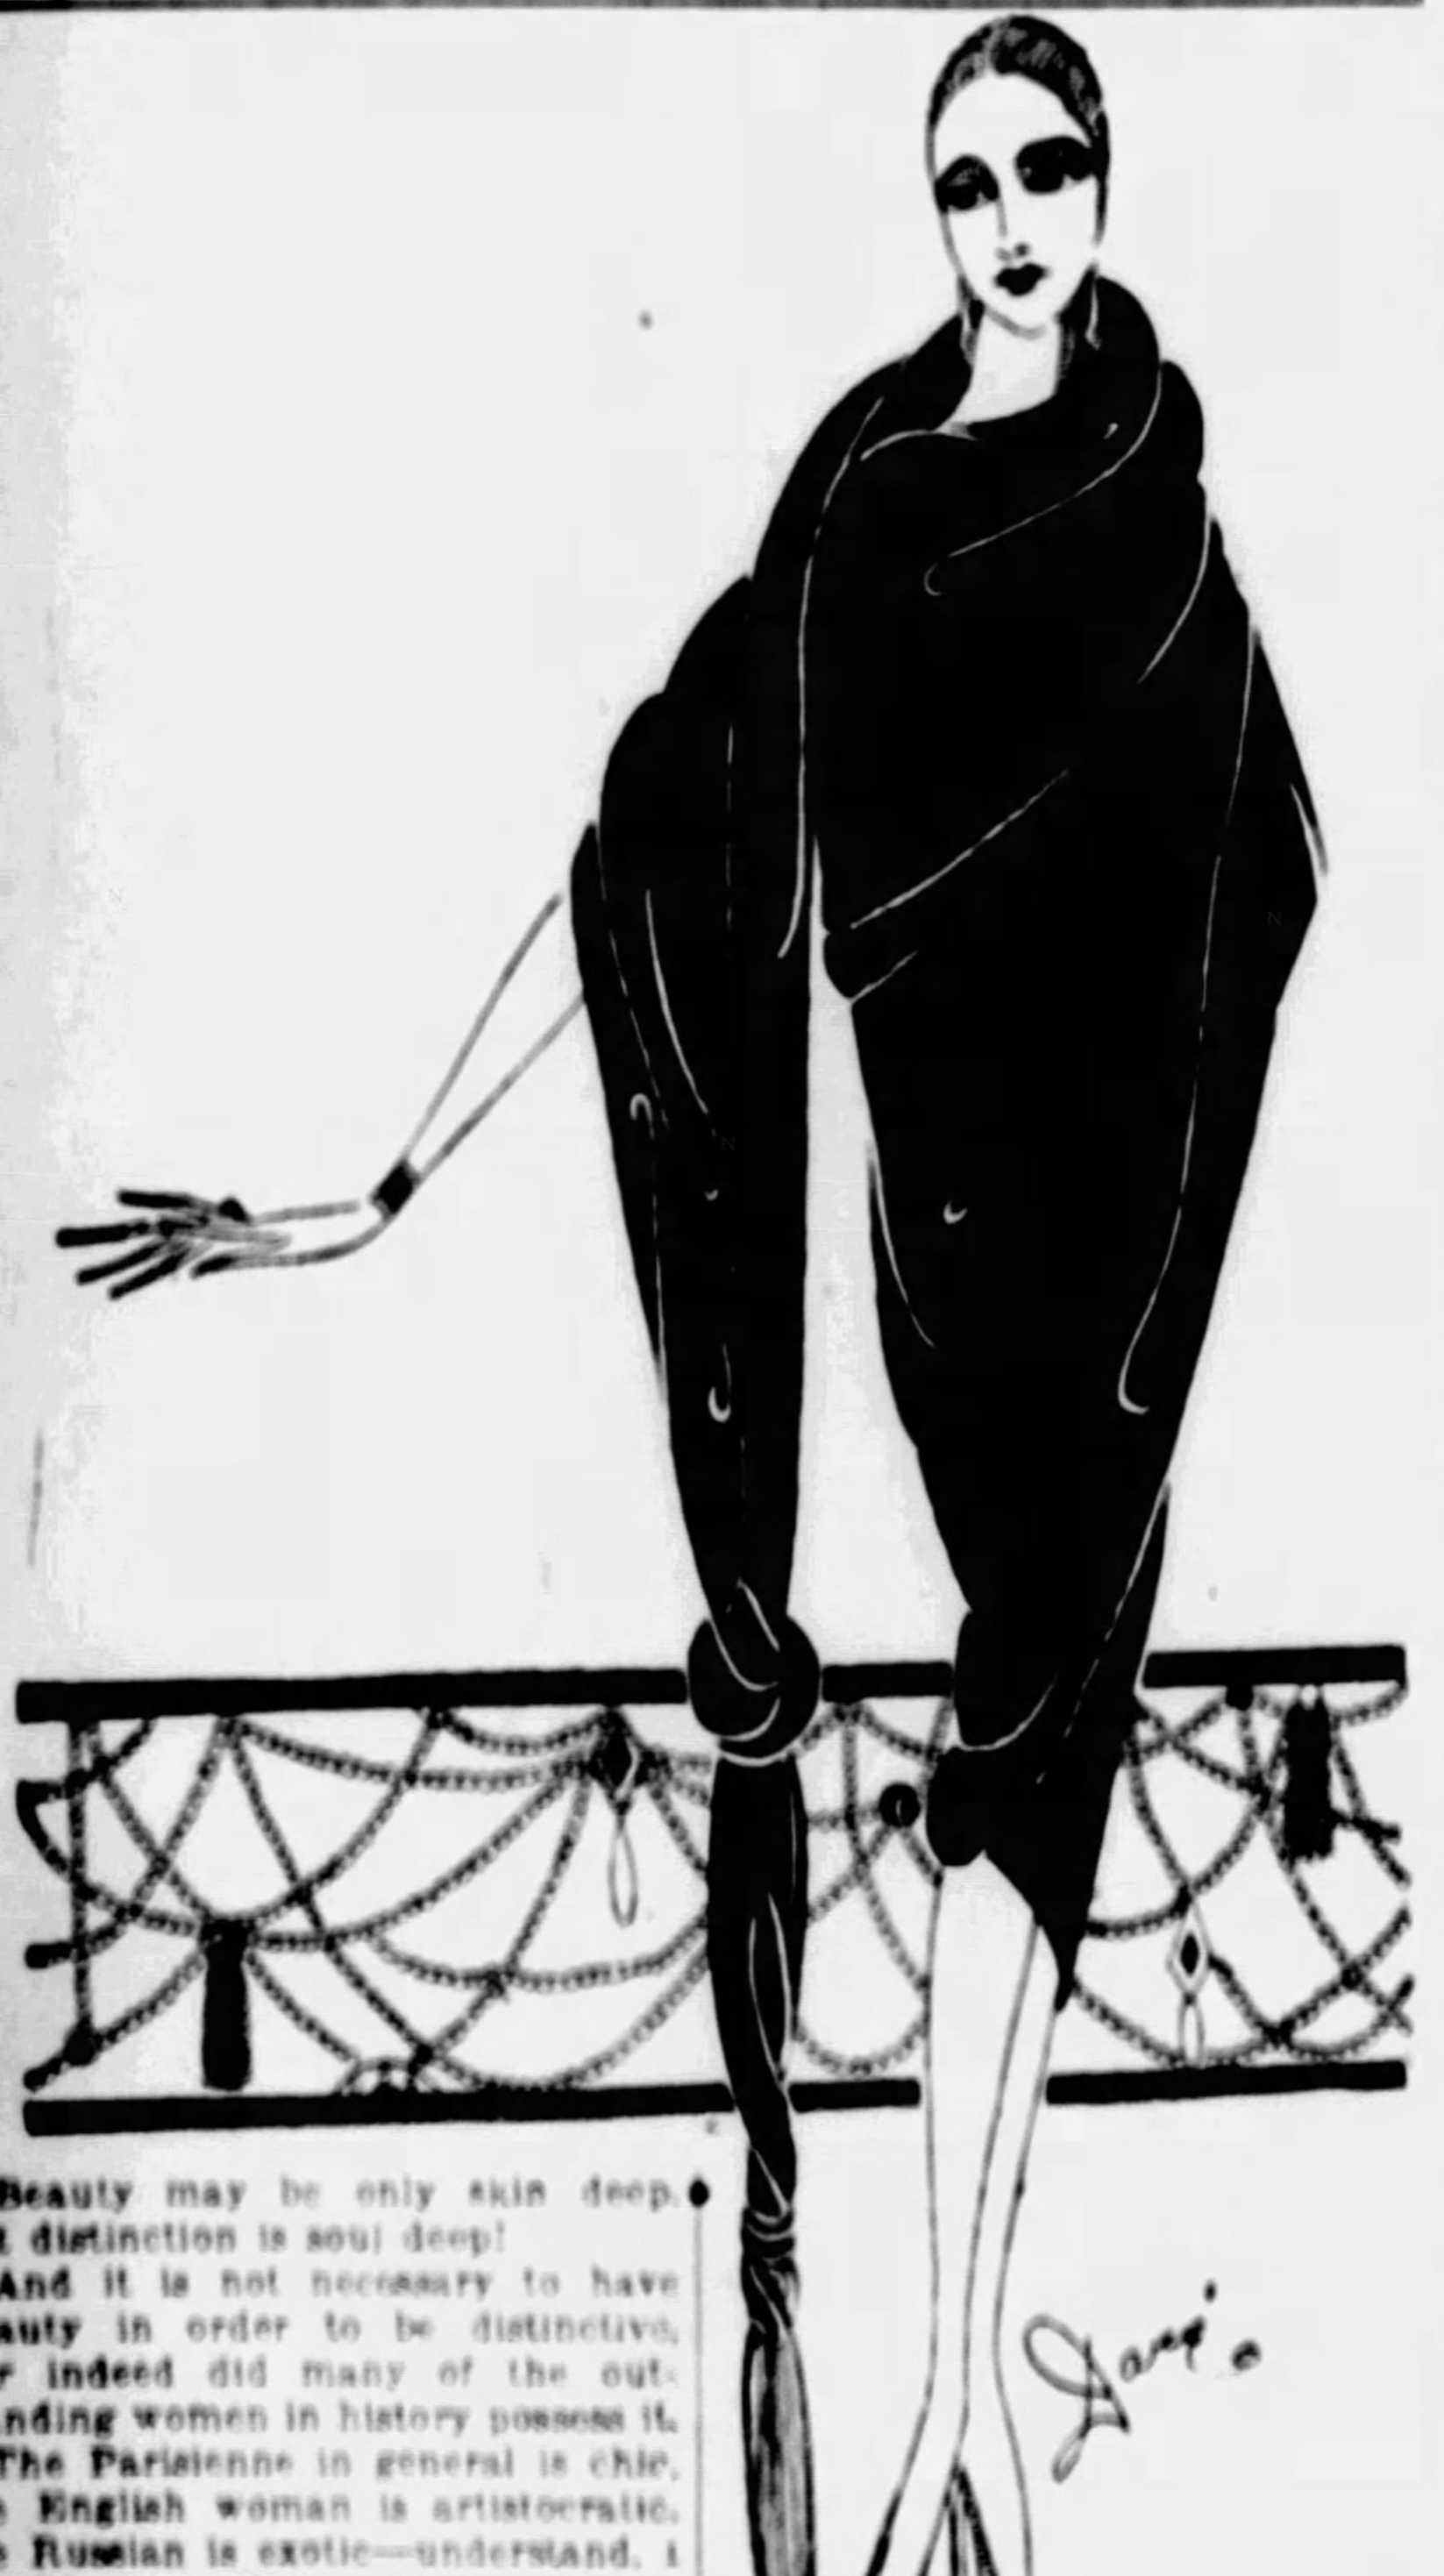
Of course the things one carries on a picnic are planned according to the way you are traveling. If you are going by automobile, with plenty of room for provisions, you can have a more elaborate meal than if you are going by street car or bus, and if you have to walk to the eating place your food will be such as to stand compact packing and everything disposed of after the meal, so as not to carry anything home. Sandwiches, pickles, deviled eggs, cake and fruit with paper drinking cups for water will be all one will care to carry.

Then the place of the picnic must be taken into consideration. In some picnic grounds a fire may be built and in others none can be made. "Weiners," steaks, marshmallows, etc., roasted over the fire always add to the joys of the picnic. And hot coffee or other hot drinks made over the fire are also nice. However, coffee may be carried in the ever useful thermos bottle all ready to drink if one has the facilities for carrying it.

French Peach Ice Cream.

Pare, stone and cut fine enough good flavored peaches to make one quart. Put the fruit into a saucepan with a pint and a quarter of sugar, melt, boil gently, skim and cook for a few minutes until the fruit is tender, then cool. Turn into the freezer when cold and add a quart of heavy cream, a teaspoonful of vanilla and the stiffly beaten white of a fresh egg. Freeze as usual, and let stand to ripen for an hour before serving.

DARE INTERPRETS THE MODE



Beauty may be only skin deep, but distinction is soul deep!

And it is not necessary to have beauty in order to be distinctive, nor indeed did many of the outstanding women in history possess it.

The Parisienne in general is chic, the English woman is aristocratic, the Russian is exotic—understand, I do not mean that any one of these three may not possess all or none of these qualities!

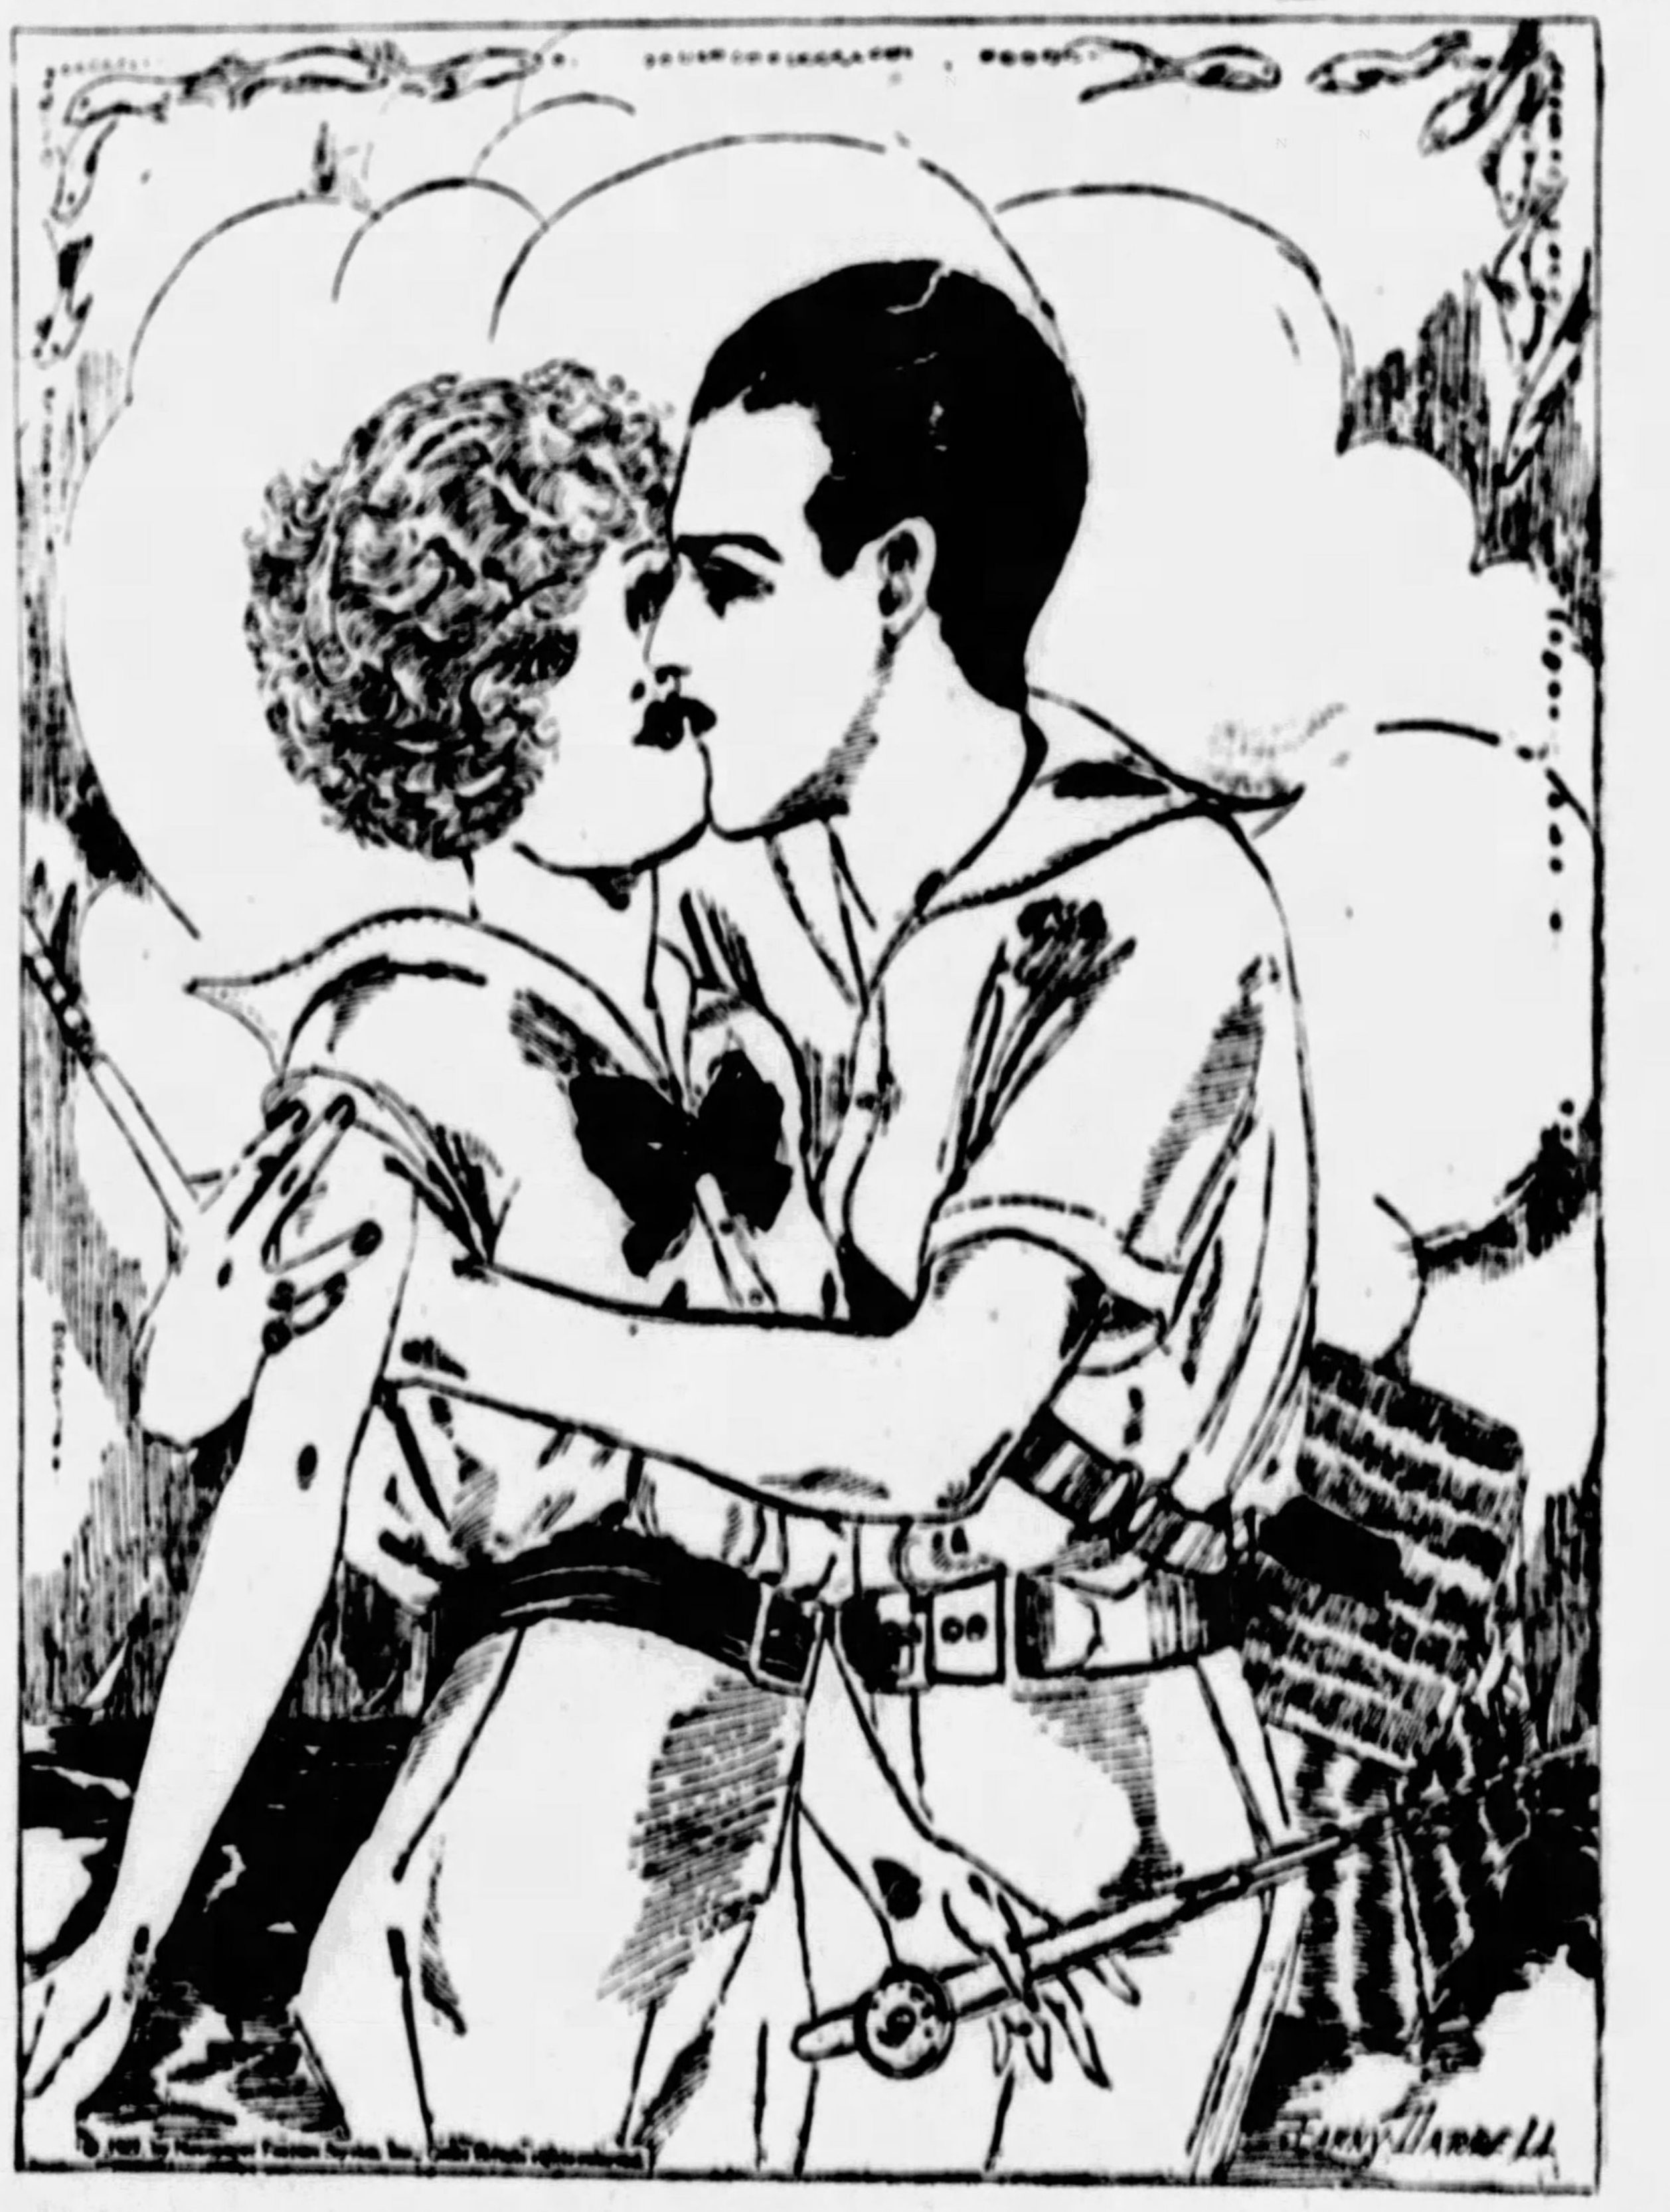
But from what nation does one select the woman of distinction? From neither one nor the other, but occasionally from every nation. I believe that one possibly sees more distinctive women in Europe than in America, but only because Europe favors this and an outstanding type is less conspicuous.

In an age where the bobbed coiffure may be as readily found in Pekin, where the senorita of Seville twines her neck in pearls that are exactly the shape, size and color of the Washington debutantes, it is refreshing to know that a few lovely ladies still remain who retain their individuality without in anyway appearing just "odd."

If you have any claims to distinction, try to build your personality around them rather than subdue them!

And if you have the carriage and the bearing that could "get away with" such a cape as the one illustrated today, do you doubt its ability to remove you from the commonplace? It is fashioned simply of exquisite soft, black velvet, is lined with a rose-tinted lame (lah-ma) and weighed with a tassel made of strips of the velvet. There is scarcely anything more that I can say about it, for the style explains itself in the illustration!

The Season's Catch By Fanny Darrell



THE fishing season was unusually good to these two young people this summer. They met for the first time at the brook. It didn't take long for them to realize that they were kindred spirits in their love of sports, particularly fishing. And as they cast their lines and sat there awaiting a nibble, the kindly fates wove a net about them.

The fates were not alone in their conspiracy, for romance was lurking in their secluded spot, and Cupid, the arch-conspirator, was just marking time before releasing his fatal arrows. Thus it continued day in and day out, until the day of days when the fisherman and fisherwoman forgot all about the fish in the brook. "The season's best catch," said the envious ones.

Tall Men Need Most Food

A TALL, thin man requires more food than a short fat one, even though both are of the same weight, according to a Japanese doctor, who declares that the amount of food needed depends upon the total area, not the weight of the body.

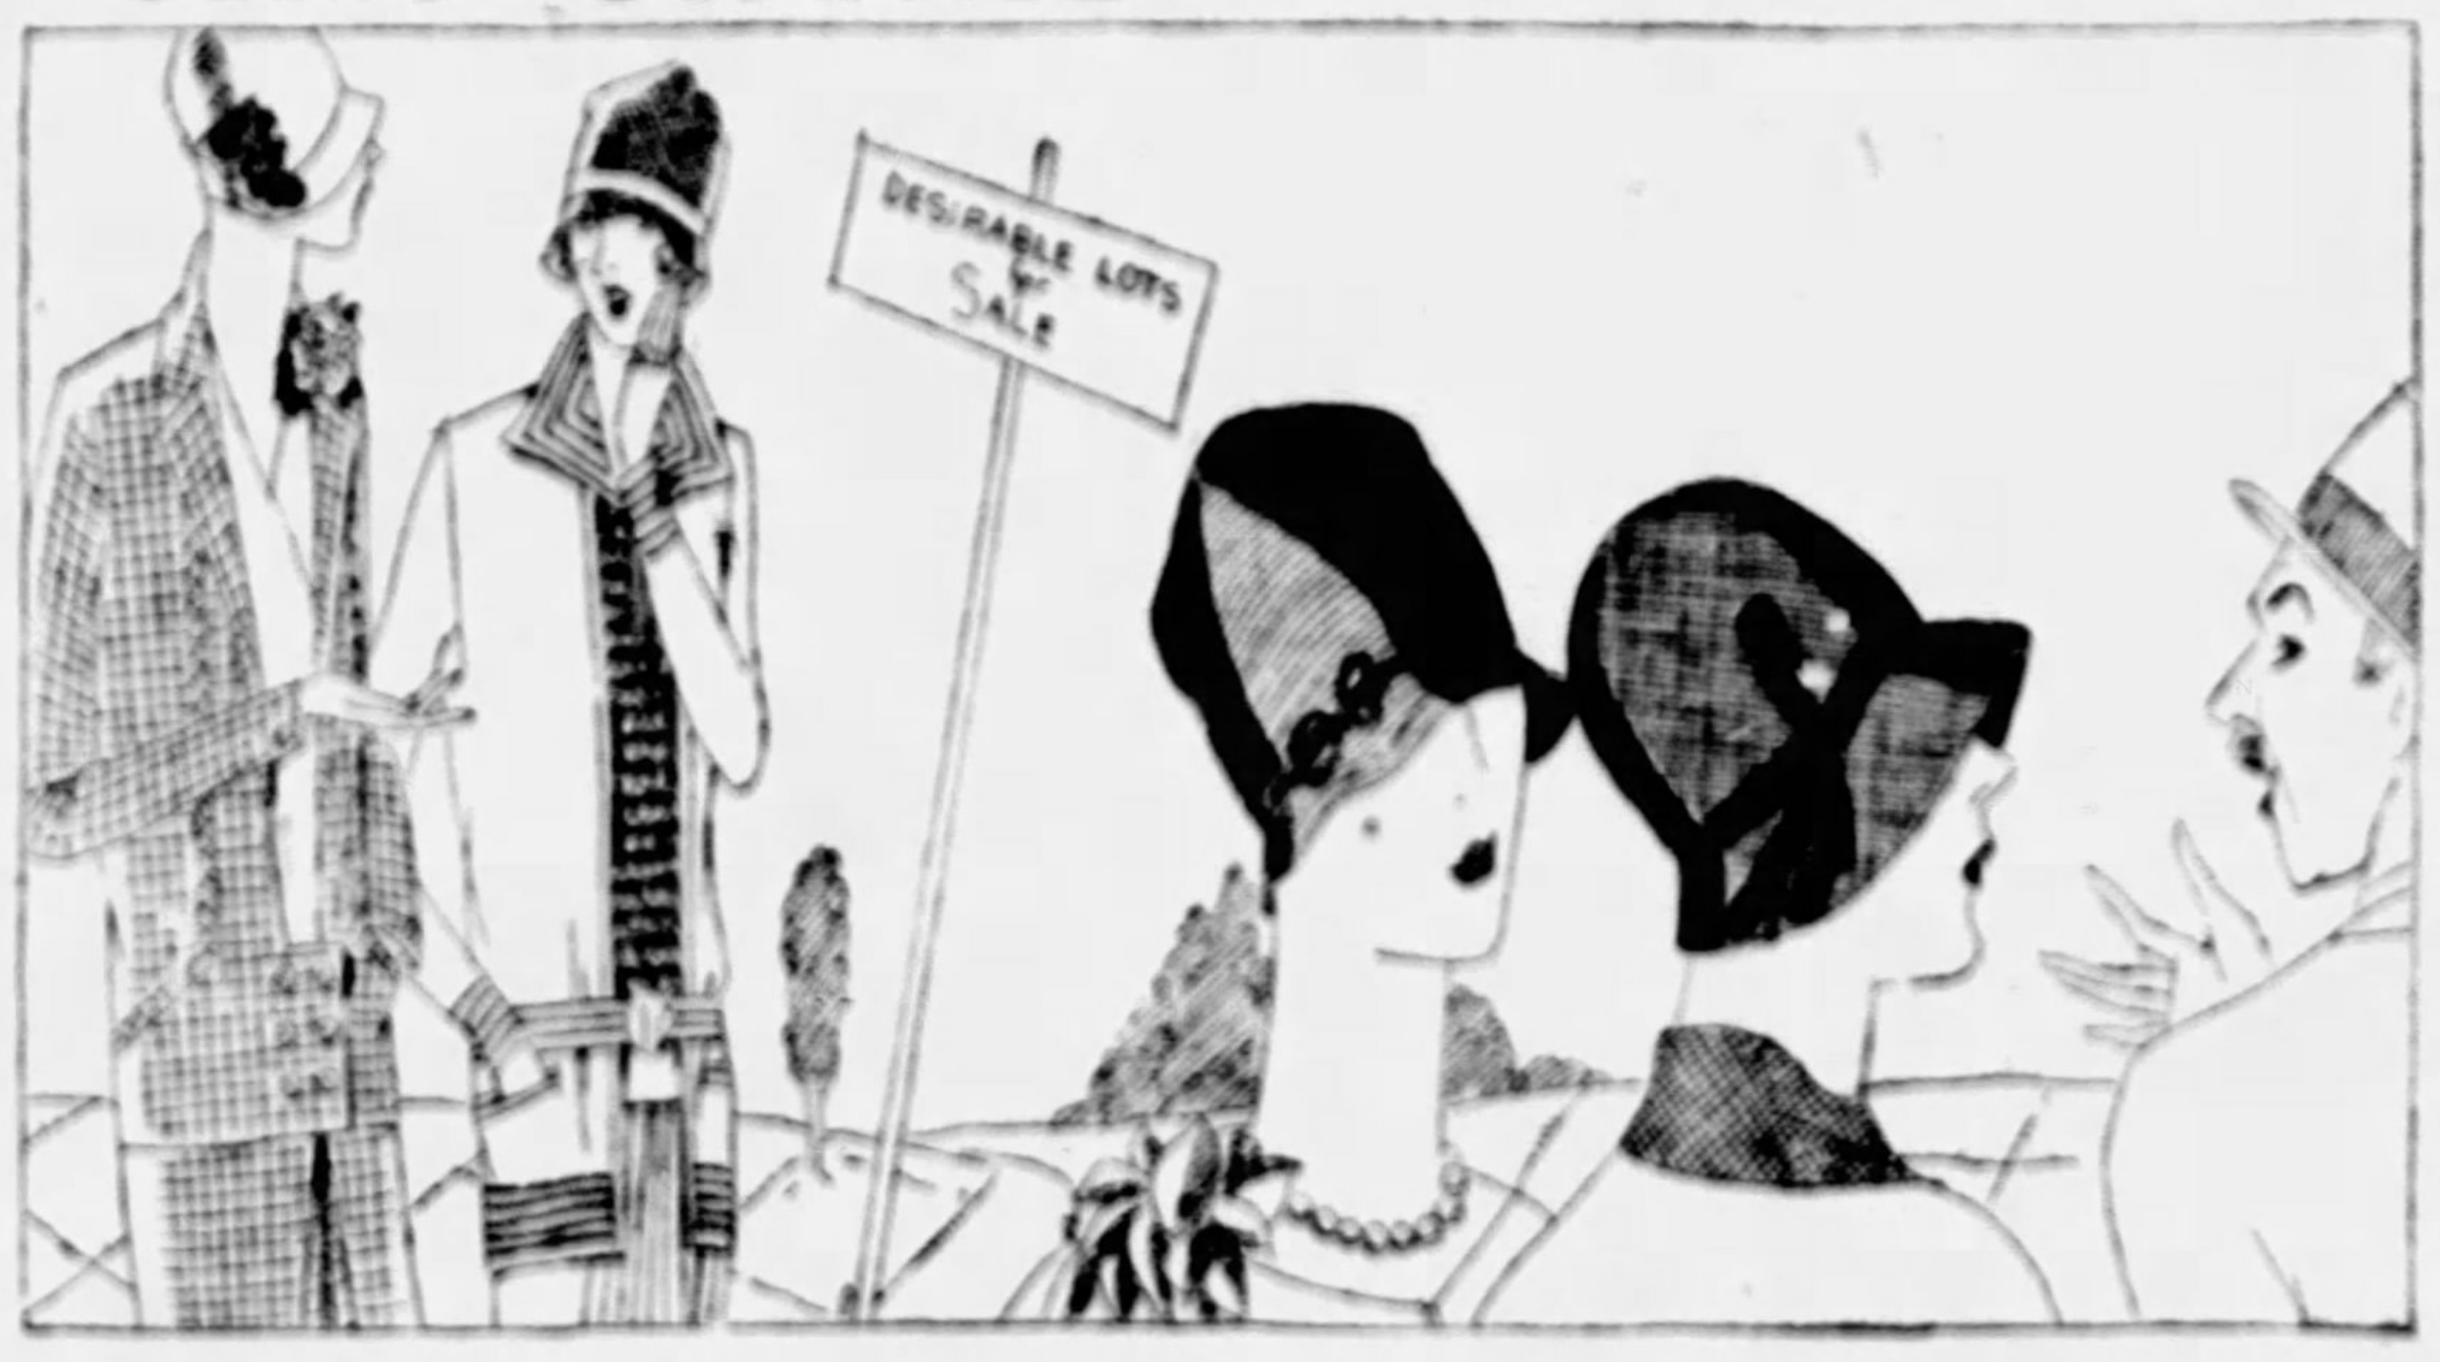
Old Cathedral in Many Uses

ESSEX'S oldest cathedral is a barn-like edifice which was built in 663 at Ithanchester, now Bradwell-on-Sea. The sacred building has been in turn a church, a lighthouse, a barn and a billet for soldiers.

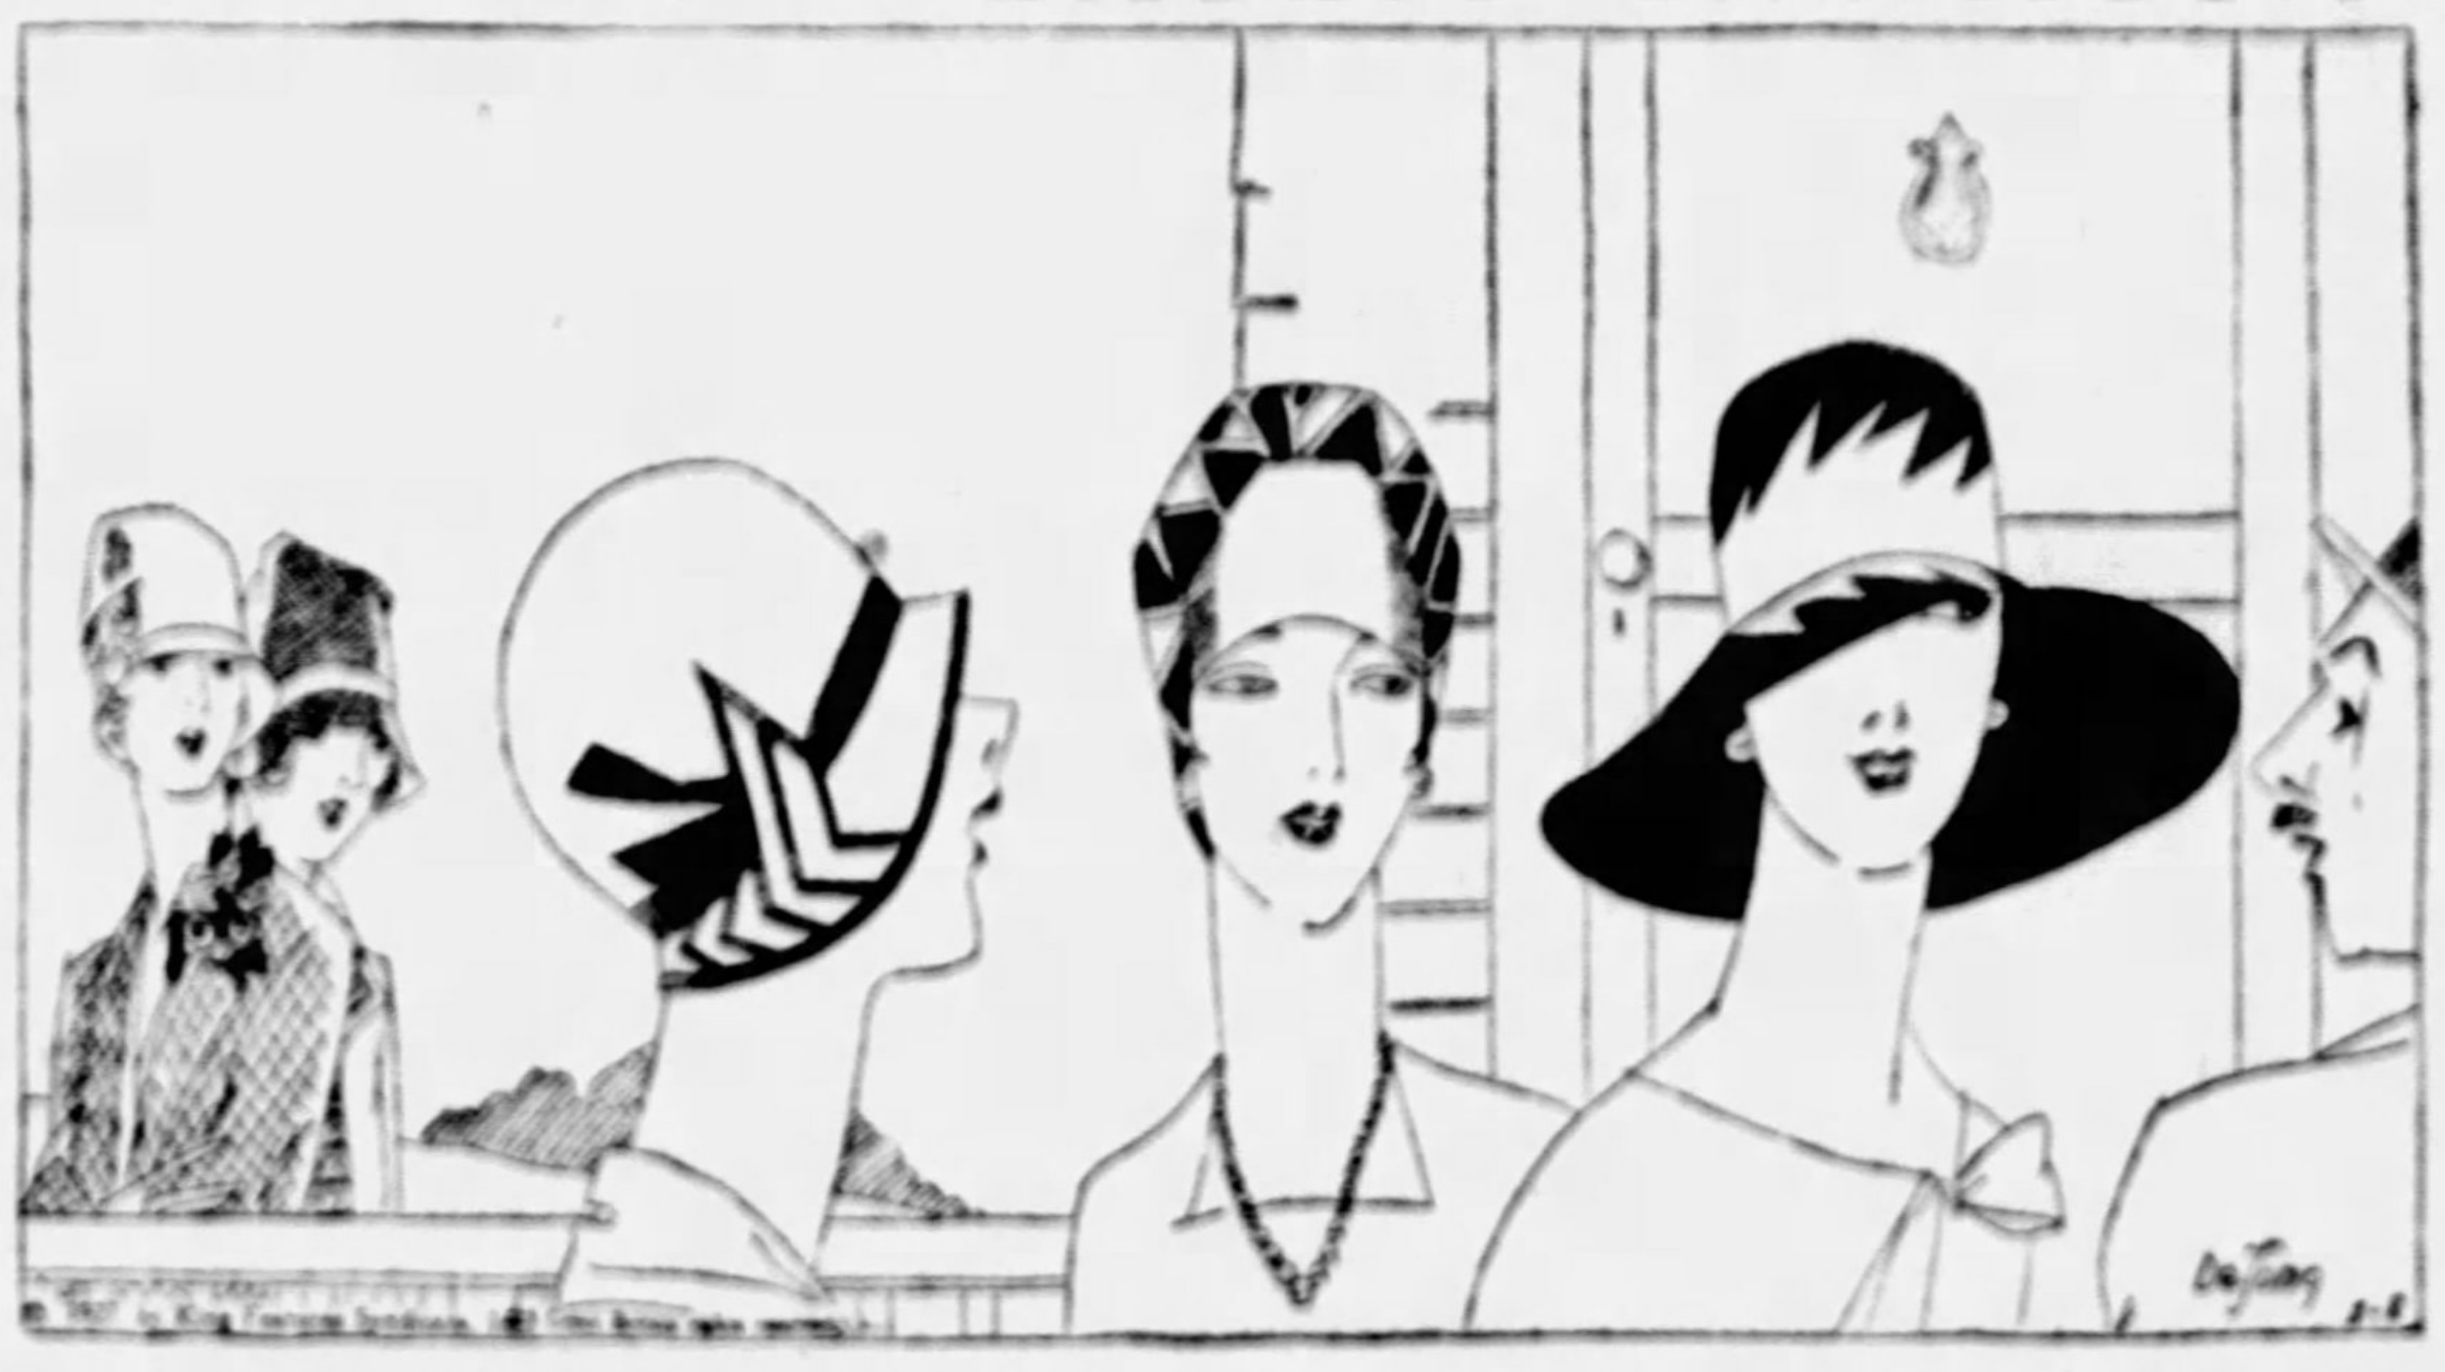
CHIC CHERIE

The End of Almost Everything.

LATEST FASHIONS



The two completely astounded young ladies to the left of the picture are Dina and Cherie. Where is Aunt Em? Where are the ancestral acres? This is the spot on the map where both should be visible and since Dina and Cherie have only fifty cents between them they're not interested in buying real estate. Just in passing we should like to say that Cherie is wearing a brown and tan checked tweed suit, the coat cut in a rather unusual fashion. Dina is clad in a knitted jacket costume with a sweater blouse of silk and metal cloth. The ladies to the right wear straw and velvet hats.



After all, it is the old farm. At least it's where the old farm was. Just at the moment there seems to be nothing for Cherie and Dina to do except to admire the hats of the happy ladies who are buying lots. These hats are all startlingly modernistic, trimmed with zigzags of ribbon or felt or velvet applique. Recommended to be worn with dresses of the same tendency. Even with only fifty cents capital Cherie and Dina admire them before starting on the serious detective business of finding Aunt Em. If they don't find her, as Cherie says, this is the end of all but new Fall fashions.

FOR THE LOVELORN

By ELEANOR GALE

Blue Little Girl.

DEAR MISS GALE:

If any one had ever told me that I would some day write to your column to seek your advice I would have laughed very much at the idea. Just as many other things that I have done as well as many other things that have happened formerly would have seemed humorous. But now, I do not wonder that the world is full of cynics. Will you listen to my tale of woe? Perhaps it is not unusual, but I little dreamed it would ever happen to me. I loved a boy very dearly. He went away after getting his degree. He asked me to marry him and go along, but I, laughingly, refused—what a fool I was. I had two more years at college and wanted to finish before I married. I thought the boy I loved would wait until I had finished school. But he went away two months later without even a goodbye. He wrote after he arrived in the South. When he came home he always came to see me, oh, and he told me he loved me, and I believed him, and I loved him as I could never love anyone else. And he married—oh, he married another girl. A girl whom he had gone with before he and I met and with whom he went while we went together. I knew of her and she of me. We attend the same college. But she hated me and determined I shouldn't have the boy I loved. Well, she got him, but I shall never love another. I shall never forget the boy I loved. I can finish college and have my career without interference now. Life has played quite the joke on me. Your advice, of course, will be to forget the boy. But when someone has grown so dear that they are life itself—and then to have life stolen from one—well it makes one wonder if there is a God who loves us. I ought to. Oh, what to do—how to rid myself of the continual ache in my heart. Surely someday he will be mine. The boy I loved was married six months before it was announced. I saw him during that time, gave him my photograph and he wore my Greek letter pin and I was to have his fraternity pin—instead I received the announcement of his marriage. Well, I suppose the whole incident is merely part of life. Ho, what a life. Your column is interesting and amusing in turn. These sophisticated and blase flappers and supposedly worldly wise boys—what do they know of life and love. But why not go the pace? But even going the pace becomes very boring after a while. I enjoyed "Little Boy Blue's" very cleverly written poem—story of his faithless love. It is not a pleasant sensation to love someone and have them vanish, is it, "Boy Blue"? Thank you for the time and space.

BLUE LITTLE GIRL.

Yours is a very real heartbreak, my dear, and of course there is nothing I can say to comfort you. Only time can do that. But why do you feel so bitterly toward the other girl, rather than the man? He is the one who was faithless, not she. She probably cares just as much for him as you do, and you surely cannot blame her for doing something that you wish you had done. It is entirely the son's fault. He could not be "stolen" against his will, you know.

Blue Eyes.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been going with two young men. They came to see me twice and the second time I introduced them to my sister. A few days later they asked her for a date and she gave it to them.

I am jealous of my sister, for since she gave them a date they have not so much as spoken to me and I can't help but be angry.

Do you think it was right for her to take them away from me? Why should she want them when she has two "steadies"? I love my sister very much and it hurt me when she took both of them.

Please tell me what to do. Must I leave them alone and act as if I don't care, or must I try and win them back?

BLUE EYES.

My advice to you is to forget those young men, Blue Eyes. No girl ever won any man by trying to get him. Her very anxiety to win his attention drives him away more surely than obvious disinterestedness. And if you want to have your own pride and self-respect you must not let your sister or those faithful swains of hers know that you are hurt or jealous. Make them think that you really don't care enough about them to worry over the affection they transferred so readily. Now as for your sister. It may be that she did not go out of her way at all to fascinate your friends. The sad truth may be that they found her more interesting than you and that she did nothing to dim your brilliance. The other viewpoint is that she deliberately set out to "steal" your friends and that she did it only to prove her power and not because she wanted them. At any rate there isn't anything you can say or do to clear up the situation as far as she is concerned. What her motives were you don't know and won't unless she chooses to explain. It seems to me, my friend, that you ought to stop worrying about the whole affair. You weren't in love with either of these boys and so the task of putting them out of your mind won't be very hard. There are others who will appreciate you and value your friendship. They are the only people who should concern you.

Miserable.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a bride of 18. Before we were married my husband was well and we were happy. Since our marriage he is always ailing and sick. He has told me that he does not care for me. I have loved him as much as any woman ever loved a man. He wants me to go to dances, but he says a million times that he will not "step out." Shall I believe him? I want him and need him, but he says that I am young and can get somebody else. He says that he only cares for his son, born of a former marriage. His first wife is in another city and I am afraid he still sees her. I lost my mother six weeks ago and am keeping house for a sister, brother and dad as well as my husband. Shall I send my sister and brother to relatives and leave my husband? I cannot go on living with a complaining dad and hatred from my husband. What, oh, what, shall I do?

MISERABLE.

It is quite improbable that your husband has ceased to love you. Perhaps you have over-emphasized your need for "stepping out." You may have made him bitter, made him feel too keenly the difference in ages, experience and interests. If you love him you must expect to sacrifice certain youthful pleasures. Make him believe that you would rather spend a happy evening at home with him than go out to dances. And act as though you meant the words. Have you ever thought that your home is unhappy, because you have made no effort to make it otherwise? Through your discontent you have probably bred an atmosphere of discord. I don't want to seem harsh. But I want you to see that it is your duty to yourself and the husband you admit you need to make your marriage a success. Tell him you love him. Tell him you need him, that you have no wish to find "somebody else." Reassure him and give him confidence in the future. You will find that his bitterness will disappear and that his indifference was merely an attitude.

Modern Miss.

DEAR MISS GALE:

Let me try to enlighten "Atmosphere's Opposer" on the subject of women. "Atmosphere's Opposer," in your letter you seemed to think "Atmosphere" was wrong on two subjects. Why do you correct people when you don't know much more yourself? You say man is better than woman. God made man and was not satisfied, so he made woman and was satisfied. On the other question. You say that a girl cannot be pretty using cosmetics. Of course they can't, if they decorate themselves up like a "circus wagon" (as you say). But show me the girl that is pretty without using a little powder. There isn't such a creature. If there were she would be in a museum so everyone could go and look at her. The only reason you don't like cosmetics is because you like to pet and don't want to get your face dirty as you say. But if you pet every girl you go out with, don't you think your face will be dirty, even if they don't use cosmetics? Now, Miss Gale and readers, what do you think of me? Maybe you will think I am an old maid, but I am only 19 and modern in every way. I attend one of the most exclusive girls schools here in Pittsburgh, have a car and can do almost anything I want. I was picked as the most popular girl in school, and it was not on account of money, petting, drinking or smoking. So, girls, don't waste your time doing things like that, for it doesn't pay. Fellows will offer you something to drink or smoke, but turn them down. If they are the right kind, they will come back and later they will tell you how glad they are that you didn't accept their offers. Hoping to see this in print soon, and wishing you all the success in the world, Miss Gale, I remain, "MODERN MISS."

You seem to have very good standards of conduct, my dear, and I hope you always will maintain them.

Wondering.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl in my teens. I have been going with a young fellow, a few years my senior, for some time. Recently he started breaking dates and by chance I met him on the street and he explained to me the reason for this. He said that a few years ago he went with a girl whom he dearly loved, but he lost her friendship and he says he'll never forget her. He feels that he doesn't want another girl. At times these spells strike him, and he feels better among his boy friends. I don't see how I can give him up.

WONDERING.

If this young man really feels that his love for this girl interferes with his interest in you, then there isn't anything you can do to help him change his mind. But I think that in time he will forget the part she played in his life and seek new friendships. Accept his invitations, but don't be too aggressive, my dear. Wait until you are certain of his interest in you before you invite him to call or show him in any other way that you are fond of him.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

TUESDAY, AUGUST 9.

MENACING stars rule strongly today, according to astrology, which gives warning to be careful.

Except to buy land there should be extreme care where any sort of investment is involved, the seers declare.

Under this direction of the stars it is supposed to be uncommonly easy for unscrupulous persons to persuade women to risk their money.

While this configuration prevails the mind may be muddled and the judgement untrustworthy.

False reports of various sorts may be circulated where they will be eagerly accepted, when the stars are posited as they are today.

Again danger of scandals and libel suits is far-reaching and evil propaganda will flourish, astrologers foretell.

All important initiative should be postponed, if the stars are to be trusted, for conditions are thwarting and disappointing.

Merchants and manufacturers are to meet certain surprising conditions more or less depressing, it is prognosticated, but they will profit later.

Many distinguished visitors will come to the United States early in the autumn, it is foretold, and missions from foreign nations may be expected.

Again Zymotic diseases are foretold by London seers who stress the importance of the best sanitary conditions in cities.

Women and children are still subject to planetary influences that are more or less sinister and they should be especially safeguarded.

New ideas of many sorts are to be welcomed and inventors will benefit greatly in the coming year.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a busy, happy year in which it is better to enjoy the things possessed than to seek added treasures.

Children born on this day may have rather a struggle in life but they have the promise of great success.

QUICKSANDS OF LOVE

A New Phase of "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

AS I busied myself in the kitchenette over the iced drink which Dicky had requested, I found my mind circling around my father's warning concerning the signs of illness which he professed to have discovered in my husband's face. Was it possible that Dicky really was "sickening for something" in Mrs. Ticer's homely phrase, and that I had not noticed it? I tried to content myself with the reflection that Katherine, an exceptionally trained observer because of her long experience as a nurse, apparently had noticed nothing amiss, then as I saw her coming down the private staircase, I resolved to bolster my own courage with her opinion.

"I've come down for a new supply of that special soap I use for Junior's bath," she said, as she came into the kitchenette. "I used the last tonight. What are you doing, oh! making that stuff for Dicky again? Do you mind if I have a glass? I'm thirsty and I have no compunction in taking it away from him. If I drank it steadily as he does, I'd be in a hospital with all my digestive organs being carved into nice little pieces."

"Of course, you may," I said, and did not speak again under a pretense of busying myself with the beverage until I had poured her a glass and she had drained it. Then I asked her a direct question.

Katherine, tell me honestly. Do you think that Dicky is ill?"

She looked into her glass for a second or two before answering.

"I told you long ago that a good nurse never diagnoses and never prescribes," she said, and I had the vague impression that she was affecting a lightness she did not feel. Then suddenly she threw up her head and faced me.

"Yes, Madge, I do think something quite serious is the matter with him."

"Then why didn't you—"

She put up her hand protestingly.

"Think a minute, Madge. You know how utterly unreasonable he is about anything pertaining to his health, how he resents any suggestion from you or anyone about it. I've thought about it for several days, and decided that if he got sick enough, he'd consult a physician himself, and in the meantime, there was no use getting you all stirred up when there was absolutely nothing you could do. When did you discover it?"

"Tonight just before dinner. I am ashamed to say that I did not see it for myself. Father called my attention to his curious pallor and the queer look in his eyes. I hadn't noticed them at all."

"Why should you?" Katherine demanded warmly, and her confirmation of my father's words eased my conscience a bit. "You're neither a nurse nor a physician, and you've not been away from the sight of Dicky for weeks as your father has. Don't blame yourself, and if I were you, I wouldn't urge a physician on your husband. You know how obstinate he is, and advice might only delay his consulting one."

"I know," I said worriedly. "He always goes in the opposite direction from the one he fancies someone is trying to drive him. But what can I do?"

"Nothing, except to keep your table free of rich foods. Curb Katie's culinary ambitions for awhile, even though we all suffer pangs of hunger for her good things. Dicky's trouble is digestive, I am sure, and that is the only way I see in which you can help."

"I'll speak to Katie the first thing in the morning," I said, "and I do hope Dicky will decide to see a doctor. Perhaps father can persuade him to do so."

"If anybody can manage him, your father can," Katherine said as she went back up the staircase, and I felt a little lightening of my spirits as, bearing the tray with a pitcher of Dicky's favorite beverage upon it, I went back into the living room.

My Son's Sweethearts

By IDA McG. GIBSON.

BOTH Phil and his mother were aware that Natlee knew all about Lyra, but neither of them guessed that the girl was not aware of the break between Mrs. Tracy and her old friend on account of Phillip.

Anne Tracy, however, was too honest to pass this over with the usual conventional hypocrisy.

"I don't think she's a friend of mine any more, Natlee," she said.

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Tracy. I didn't know that. Indeed, she spoke very beautifully of you the last time I saw her. I like her much better than I used to. She doesn't henna her hair any more and it seems the war has made her quite human. She isn't thinking of herself all the time and the impression she is making on any man she happens to be near. She has dropped her youthful and flapperish airs and it's very becoming. Now you, Wynne, have grown so old and dignified that I'm really afraid of you."

"And you, Natlee, have grown so young and frivolous and bewitchingly lovely, that I'm afraid of you."

"I'm not all that, Wynne. It's just the contrast between the American girls and the French. Did you really like them?"

Philip grinned. "Well, I thought I did while I was over there."

"That's a nice compliment," Natlee exclaimed, "almost the nicest I've received since you went away. It sounds more like you than anything I've heard you say since I came to breakfast."

"But you're not eating anything, my dear," put in Mrs. Tracy.

"No one eats anything nowadays. We must keep our boyish figures, you know. And now I really must run. Awfully sorry, Mrs. Tracy, but Dad seemed to find a dozen things for me to do for him this morning. He knew I was coming here to give Wynne the once over and say 'Welcome home'."

Again Philip smiled. "Your father doesn't seem to have lost any of his old prejudices, my dear."

"Well, he can't say very much against a man who has stopped a bullet in such a way that only a croix de guerre is supposed to cover the scar."

"Good-bye, dear Mrs. Tracy. You'll let me come again soon, won't you? And as for you, Wynne—" She turned and held out both hands. She seemed about to speak. Was there a mist of pain in the dark blue eyes? He could not tell, and before he had decided, she was gone.

Mother and son looked at each other in silence for some seconds after the girl had left the room.

"It's rather an overpowering Natlee, isn't it, Mum?"

"Philip, I think she's acting."

"Don't be foolish. No one could act as well as she did this morning."

There was a grinding of gears in front of the house. Quickly Phillip got up and went to the window. There he saw Natlee, her head bent over the wheel, seemingly making futile efforts to drive the car.

He did not realize until he had gotten to her that she was crying.

"Natlee, Natlee, dear," he exclaimed in consternation.

"Go way, Wynne Tracy. What are you doing here? Don't you see I don't want you around?"

"But I thought you were having trouble with the car." Phil fairly stammered over the words.

STOCKS-BONDS-GRAIN-PROVISIONS-LIVESTOCK

Lone Star Advances Screw and Bolt Up

Lone Star Gas and Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt continued to feature the dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Both issues were in steady demand and price trend was definitely upward. Buying was not up to the volume noted on several occasions last week but the tone was strong and traders continued to discuss the probabilities of favorable dividend action by directors of both companies.

Reports of negotiations between Lone Star and one of the big oil companies persist but the factor is not considered as bearing on the current activity in the stock. Buying yesterday and last week was based on reports of a stock dividend of 50 per cent which some people in the street feel will be declared before any negotiations for sale of the property are completed.

The list generally was narrow and trading was in light volume. Early firmness in Standard Sanitary reflected confidence in that company's ability to retain its share of the business arising out of the sustained building activity throughout the country. National Fireproofing was moderately active but no change was noted in its price.

News and Views

Money Conditions Easy

The erratic price movements of the latter half of last week were not due to any change for the worse in the business or the comfortable credit outlook. Its indirect cause lay in impaired technical market conditions and its direct cause, the Exchange announcement of last Tuesday. The sharp arrest of the preceding upward movement has undoubtedly brought a goodly measure of delayed profit-taking into the market and it is unlikely that selling of this character has thoroughly spent itself. Combined with bearish tactics, this type of liquidation may prevent any forward movement in the next few days from attaining material success but such failure would not be viewed with alarm.

The Copper Situation

In connection with the fear that there would be a disastrous overproduction of copper metal the Daily Metal Reporter in an exhaustive analysis of the situation sees no danger in the copper situation. It asserts there is less copper in the world today in spite of increased production, that is less copper above ground, than there was at the beginning of this year. Compilations made by this authority show a gradual decline in the world's stocks of copper with 27,000 tons less copper stocks July 1 than there were at the beginning of the year. It is stated that this reflects the actual copper situation, it no longer being the case that there is an invisible stock of copper owing to the carrying of considerable quantities by consumers in reserve as consumers of copper have been following the same policy as consumers of many other commodities by buying from hand to mouth and keeping inventories at the minimum.

Amerada Corporation

Net income of $2,938,425 after all charges including depreciation depletion and federal taxes, is reported by the Amerada Corporation for the first half of 1927, compared with $2,261,553 for the corresponding period last year. These earnings are equivalent to $2.28 a share on the 811,471 shares of stock outstanding, contrasted with $3.07 on the 715,300 shares outstanding during the first half of 1926.

Gross operating income of the company increased more than $1,000,000 over the first six months of last year, mounting from $4,284,106 to $5,385,947. For the second quarter gross income totaled $4,450,218, against $2,869,044 for the corresponding quarter last year, while net income amounted to $924,154, against $1,280,131 last year. The company reports an average daily net production of 31,000 barrels of crude oil and 50,000 gallons of casinghead gasoline.

The Oil Stocks

A difference of opinion exists as to whether oil stocks are on bottom or headed lower. While the present overproduction of crude oil is more persistent than in previous periods of overoutput, steps are now being taken to curb production. Existing conditions are regarded as favorable to the purchase of oil stocks. In 1923 stock prices were at a high level by the time the price of crude oil advanced. The same was true in 1925 and 1926. Those who waited for the price of crude oil to rise in these years lost their chance to buy oil stocks cheap.

Investment Trusts

Heavy accumulation of securities by investment trusts and their withdrawal from the market is widely regarded as a contributing factor to the recent strength of the stock market. In the past few years more than 100 trusts of this nature have been organized, with aggregate resources estimated from $100,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. They are of two general kinds—one issuing so-called "bankers' shares," under which the stocks purchased are deposited with a trust company and changed only under strict regulation, while the other form is more or less speculative in nature by permitting frequent changes in securities held as collateral.

Guessing the Tonnage

Preliminary estimates of United States Steel Corporation's unfilled tonnage as of July 31 forecast a moderate increase. No figures have as yet been disclosed but that the forward orders will be larger than at the end of June is the general opinion. This feeling is based on the reduction in operations last month and the somewhat improved buying interest. The June 30 tonnage statement recorded a small gain in orders (2,035 tons) over the previous month, the first upward movement of the tonnage index this year. Report for July will be made public Wednesday.

Granby Consolidated Mining

For second quarter Granby Consolidated Mining Company is said to have earned $113,000 against $121,000 in first quarter. Its copper costs for the quarter were, it is said, 9.61 cents a pound. Every cent advance in copper adds $1 per share to Granby earnings.

Transcontinental Oil

Transcontinental Oil Company has a large potential oil production in [illegible] pool, West Texas, where it is operating in conjunction with a subsidiary of Ohio Oil Company. Drilling costs are low there and the oil can be sold at a reasonable profit even at present low crude prices. But production from this area will not be reflected in the company's second quarter results as the business was not started on the books until around the middle of June. The production has been shut in to around 19,000 barrels daily, which moves over Illinois Pipe Company's line to McCamey, but completion of a second line will bring the field's pipe line outlet to above 25,000 barrels a day. Clearing of transportation difficulties should be reflected in increased earnings during the second half of the year.

Chicago Board

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—(AP.)—Frost at several points in Canada led to a decided early upturn in wheat values today. Worse black rust advices from this side of the Canadian border were an additional stimulus to the buying side. Opening unchanged to ⅝c higher wheat ran up quickly all around. Corn and oats strengthened also, corn starting unchanged to ⅜c off, but soon scoring a sharp general advance. Provisions were easy.

With frost reports at hand from Canada and with predictions of further frost tonight in the Northwest, wheat today took a lively upward swing and corn rose to the highest point which December or March delivery has yet touched this season. Rumors were in circulation that as much as 10 degrees of frost had been experienced at some places in Saskatchewan. Meanwhile, black rust news from Minnesota and Dakotas appeared much more pessimistic.

A leading crop observer who is touring in the Northwest wired that as a result of black rust the wheat straw in many fields of the Red River Valley is falling and farmers are cutting the crop prematurely. He also reported that kernel shrinkage is showing up in the South, and promises when threshing progresses further northward to disclose damage of at least 30 per cent to bread wheat and to a lesser extent in durum all through much of Minnesota and the Dakotas.

Wall Street Briefs

Union Pacific Reserve.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP.)—Appreciation of the value of securities of other railroads and United States government obligations held by the investment trust division of the Union Pacific has resulted in an estimated paper profit since the close of 1926 of more than $6,500,000. It is estimated that this profit, plus reserve of $34,972,330, omitting unrevealed surplus from 1927 operations, would bring the corporate surplus of the Union Pacific to $276,420,000, giving the 2,229,916 shares of the company's common stock a book value of around $224 a share.

Eureka Vacuum Profit.

Net income of the Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Company for the first half of 1927 was $761,128, equal to $2.04 per share on 350,000 shares of no par, against $248,700, or $2.14 a share, for the first half of last year.

G. M. A. C. Gain.

The General Motors Acceptance Corporation reports net profits for the first half of 1927 as $5,187,712, equal to $9.14 per share on 350,000 shares of capital stock, against $2,613,263, or $13.78 a share on 190,000 shares of capital stock for the first half of last year.

The report of the Industrial Rayon Corporation and subsidiaries for the first half of 1927 shows net profit of $249,270.

Dyestuffs Down.

Prices on natural dyestuffs and tanning materials had a declining trend during the past week. The index number of prices, as calculated by the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter, was 170.1 (100 in August, 1914) at the end of the week, compared with 172.6 a week earlier and 181.8 at the corresponding time last year.

Panhandle Shows Loss.

The Panhandle Producing and Refining Company had net loss of $290,083 for the first half of 1927 against net income of $33,618, or $1.19 a share during the first half of 1926.

Juneau Gold Profit.

The Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Company reports July net income of $3,300 against a deficit of $19,200 for July, 1926.

Granby Mining Report.

The Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting and Power Company, Ltd., reports net profit for the second quarter of $113,591, against $193,945 in the preceding quarter and as compared with $461,435 for the second quarter of 1926. Net profit for the first half was $307,536, against $891,431 for the first six months of 1926.

The Pennsylvania Gas and Electric Company today declared an extra dividend of 3⅛ cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents on class A stock, payable September 1 to holders of record August 20. Similar extra dividends on class A were paid in the two previous quarters.

CURB REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP.)—Glen Alden Coal was the feature of the trading on the curb market today, advancing 9¼ points to 181¼, and after continued buying for a time fell back to 179. The movement, which was accomplished on trading of less than 2,000 shares, was connected with current reports that at the directors' meeting tomorrow action will be taken on a plan which, according to Wall street belief, will provide for splitting the stock into two shares for each share of the present issue, the new stock to be placed on a $6 basis. These reports, while finding many believers, could not be traced to official circles.

Lehigh Valley Coal followed this movement with an advance of over a point to 40½.

Movements in other industrials were mixed, some issues showing strength and making new high records, while others were in large supply and around midday the general list showed a weak tone. American Arch advanced more than 2 points to 85½, which was turned into a loss within a short time. Fajardo Sugar dropped over 2 points in the early trading and Ford Motor of Canada was in supply around 550, compared with 566, the high for the year.

Oil stocks were generally heavy, partly because of the lessened importance attached to the various plans for strengthening the trade position. Standard Oil of Indiana dropped about a point and Vacuum Oil yielded over a point. Prairie Oil was in supply at declining price. Humble made a fractional advance in the forenoon.

Some of the utility shares showed moderate strength. Southeastern Power and Electric Bond and Share made fractional gains, while United Gas and Improvement yielded at the start and then rallied.

THE SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP.)—The raw sugar market was quiet early today and in absence of business price changes were nominal. Buyers seemed willing to pay 4.46c for Cuban duty paid, but sellers were asking from 4.49 to 4.52c.

The inactivity in the spot market and larger Java crop estimates had a depressing effect in the raw sugar futures market where prices at midday showed net losses of 2 to 3 points. The Java crop is now estimated at from 2,261,000 tons to 2,300,000 tons, which compares with previous estimates of around 2,221,000 tons and seemed to inspire increased offerings from commission houses, part of which was said to be for European account.

In refined sugar a fair withdrawal demand was reported, but new business was light. Prices were unchanged at 5.65 to 5.80c for fine granulated.

Bethlehem Shorts Jolted.

Shorts in Bethlehem Steel received a drubbing in the early market when the stock was pushed up from 58 to 60⅞. It remained around the 60 level until this demand was satisfied and then slipped back to around 59. Bears jumped on Bethlehem in the low 50s several days ago when semi-official reports reached the street that dividends are not in sight for this year. It is confidently felt in some quarters, however, that payments will be resumed in 1928. There has been gossip of a possible $1 annual basis for the stock. Charles M. Schwab's statement this morning predicting general improvement in the steel industry over the remainder of the year was also regarded as having a direct influence on Bethlehem's movement.

Additional Financial News on Pages 21 and 23

HEAVY SELLING SENDS STOCKS DOWNWARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP.)—The stock market turned decidedly reactionary today on heavy selling for both accounts. Selling pressure was most effective against the high-priced industrials, several of which broke 4 to 8 points. Rails yielded with the industrials, although the losses were not as large.

The weakness of the stock market contrasted with the strength of the cotton market, which advanced $10 a bale on publication of a bullish government crop report, showing prospective yield about 1,000,000 bushels less than expected.

In the absence of any definite news developments, the selling of stocks was construed as a further correction of a weakened technical position. Despite rumors of a substantial extra distributions to stockholders, Dupont broke more than 8 points and General Motors 4. Collins & Aikman, Timken Roller Bearing, International Harvester, Case Threshing, General Railway Signal, Houston Oil, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and Manhattan Electrical Supply all sold down 5 or more points.

A few issues moved against the current trend. Bethlehem Steel crossed 60 to a new 1927 peak on buying influenced by the belief that the company would profit through the expected increase in naval tonnage as a result of the failure of the Geneva naval conference to reach an agreement. International Nickel and Congoleum also showed evidences of strength.

The New York Bond Market

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Bond prices were mostly stationary in today's market, with some of the high grade issues inclined to easiness. Presumably traders were disposed to stand by for a space, while the list readjusted itself after the spurt of buying which followed the reduction last week of the Federal Reserve Bank's rediscount rate.

New offerings in sight during the week give no indication thus far of recording any marked increase over those of last week, when the aggregate set a low record for the year.

In the listed market, fractional losses were sustained by Chesapeake Corporation 5s, Baltimore and Ohio 6s and a few other railway issues. American Writing Paper 6s attracted a few buyers around 92, their high price for the year, and Hudson Coal 5s changed hands in fair volume close to 97¾.

The foreign group was soft. French and Italian securities were quoted at little change in price, but Mexican 1910 4s dropped noticeably.

United States Government bonds attracted meager attention.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars).

Granby Copper Earnings.

The Granby Consolidated Mining Company June quarter net income, after bond interest, etc., but before depreciation and depletion, was equal to $1.19 a share on 422,260 shares outstanding. This compares with $1.24 a share on 344,804 shares in the June, 1926 quarter. For six months the net equalled $1.87 a share, against $2.59 a share in same period in 1926. Granby has retired its entire issue of $2,500,000 7 per cent debentures, leaving $757,000 of mortgage bonds the only funded charge ahead of the stock. The entire funded debt will be liquidated at maturity in 1928.

COTTON CROP OUTLOOK IS PROMISING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—Cotton of this year's growth ginned prior to August 1 totaled 162,678 running bales, compared with 47,779 bales to that date last year and 161,632 on August 1, 1925, the Census Bureau announced today in its first ginning report of the season. Ginnings by states were not given.

The August 1 condition of the crop, which compares with 69.8 per cent a year ago, 65.6 in 1925 and 67.4 in 1924, indicated an approximate yield of 156.8 pounds per acre, compared with 181.9 pounds in 1926 and 155.7 pounds, the average for the last five years.

The total indicated production is based on the assumption that the area abandoned this season will be equal to the average of the last 10 years, leaving, from the 42,683,000 acres in cultivation July 1, an area of 41,139,000 acres for harvest this year. The final outturn of the crop, the department stated, will depend upon whether the various influences affecting the crop during the remainder of the season are more or less favorable than usual. Last year's crop was 17,977,374 bales, that of 1924 was 16,103,679 bales and in 1923 it was 13,627,936 bales.

The condition of the crop on August 1 by states was: Virginia, 75; North Carolina, 78; South Carolina, 66; Georgia, 63; Florida, 71; Missouri, 61; Tennessee, 69; Alabama, 70; Mississippi, 68; Louisiana, 64; Texas, 69; Oklahoma, 75; Arkansas, 65; New Mexico, 83; Arizona, 85; California, 90, and all other states, 67. Indicated production for Lower California is 62,000 bales.

Cotton Market

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 3 points. Trading was quiet, and the initial action of the market was regarded by local brokers as indicating that scattering accounts had been well evened up in preparation for the government crop report.

Liverpool cables were better but there was selling here for foreign account which, combined with some further commission house liquidation, sent prices off to 17.22c for December contracts, or within 4 points of last week's low level and about 12 to 17 points below Saturday's closing quotations.

General business continued quiet, however, and the market was a few points up from the lowest at the end of the first hour, on covering, with traders evidently waiting for the official crop figures.

There was a little spurt of covering just before trading was suspended to receive the government report. December contracts were selling around 17.40c or about 7 points net higher. The official crop figures making the condition 69.5 and the indicated crop 13,492,000 bales was far below expectations, as recent private reports on the average had pointed to a crop of about 14,579,000 bales. This was reflected by an excited demand as soon as the market reopened after the publication of the figures, prices advancing to 19.22c for December or 2 cents a pound as compared with the low point of the morning and 183 points above Saturday's closing quotation.

Why not a Hero Fund for the first assistant moving picture director to say "No"?

Of course, he won't live to enjoy the money, but it will at least provide for a decent funeral with enough left over for the widow to buy her next wedding dress.

And perhaps enough after that to keep her in spending money until the alimony begins coming in.

SONG OF THE ASSISTANT DIRECTORS

The assistant directors are we
With a hinge in every knee,
And heads that nod agreement every time.
We each carry a megaphone
Through which we each intone
Forever and ever and aye, this lovely rhyme:

CHORUS

Oh, yes sir, yes sir, yes.
Oh, yes sir, yes sir, yes.
Yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, yes, yes.
Oh, yes sir, yes sir, yes.
And once again a yes.
We will give a prize to the one so wise
That can make the nearest guess
Of the time when we
Will cease to be
The singers of Yes, Yes, Yes.

(Second verse)

There was one time a misguided man,
Yes, a member of our clan,
Who so far forgot himself as to say "No."
But our vengeance, it was quick,
For we seized a handy brick
And purged our ranks with one corrective blow.
(Chorus)

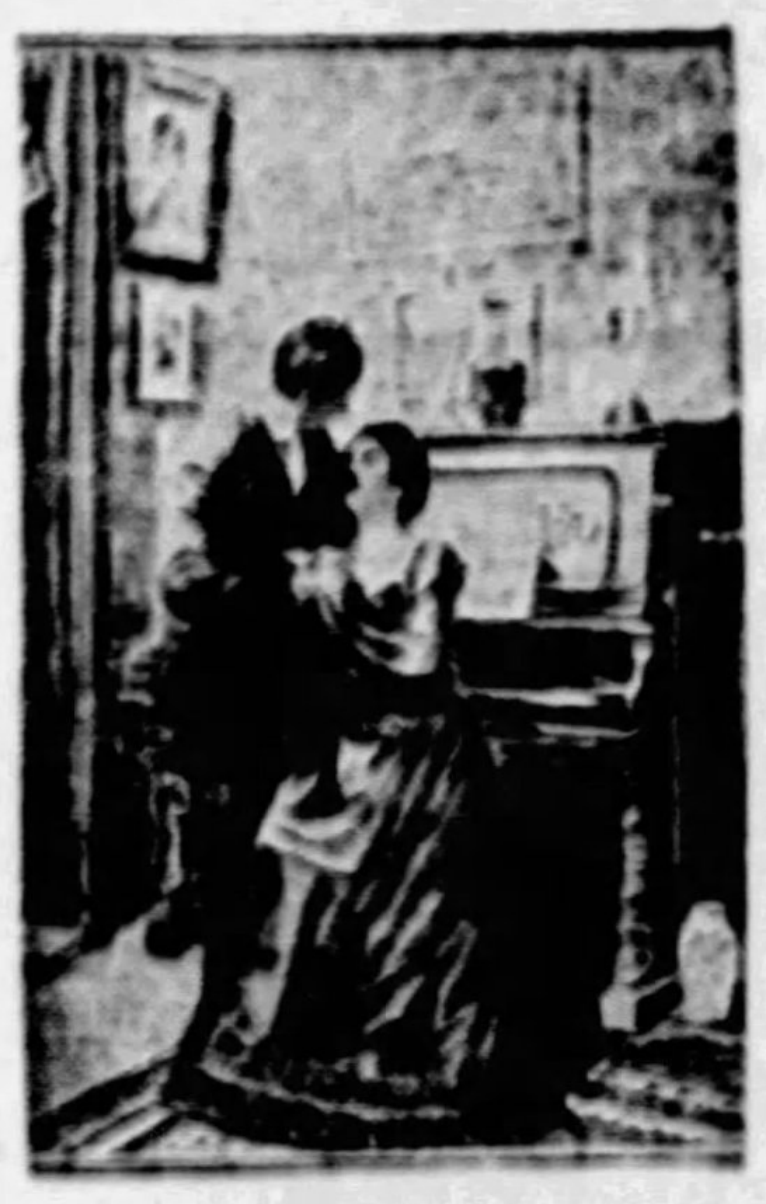
BOOK REVIEW



"He possessed that power—strange, occult."

Note—To stimulate good, clean Summer reading, our Mr. Frisby is calling attention to "Maurine," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, published in 1901.

As you already know (and if you don't, our circulation department will supply back issues at a nominal cost), Maurine La Pelle has, as her house guest, a Miss Helen Trevor. The gals are all a-flutter because this night young Mr. Vivian Dangerfield has come to call. In fact, he is already in the parlor.

Mr. Dangerfield's sex appeal is best described by the author, who has Maurine say:

" . . So we two glided down the hall and stair,
Arm clasping arm, into the parlor, where
Sat Vivian, bathed in sunset's gorgeous light.
He rose to greet us. Oh! his form was grand;
And he possessed that power, strange, occult,
Called magnetism, lacking better word . . .
. . . Touch his hand,
It thrilled through all your being—meet his eye,
And you were moved, you knew not how, or why.
Let him but rise, you felt the air was stirred
By an electric current. This strange force
Is mightier than genius.* Rightly used,
It leads to grand achievements; but abused . . .
It bears miasma in its scorching breath . . .
Vivian was not conscious of him,
Although his glance would make a wild beast cower."

Now that you have some idea of Vivian's voltage, be sure to get tomorrow's paper and learn what happened in the parlor. Life is like that.

• • •

Pardon the yawn, but Morenia thinks a current book is a treatise on electricity.

France Wants to Collect, But Not to Pay Her Debts

Andre Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States during the war and now a member of the Poincare Cabinet, gave an interview to a Washington magazine last week, saying that the French-American debt agreement is dead.

He went on to say that no French Parliament would think of ratifying the Berenger-Mellon agreement, whereby France is to pay us 50 cents on the dollar on the three billion dollars that we loaned to her during the war.

Tardieu now repudiates the interview, seeing the storm it raised in this country. No well-informed person doubts that he actually said just what he was quoted as saying by Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, the official organ of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

It is just what Tardieu says in his book, published earlier this year, entitled "France and America." The whole book is an argument for debt cancellation. On page 243, speaking of the growing estrangement between France and America since the war, he says:

> "Between us there was but one business tie—a dead and putrid tie—our debts."

The friendship between the American and the French people is not involved in this matter. The French people have a right to feel shame, as we feel contempt, for Andre Tardieu.

What does the man say in his own book about what we did for his country when it was at the point of death? Read this, on page 216:

> "In less than eighteen months the United States armed itself to the teeth; its army grew from 190,000 to more than 5,000,000 (two million actually landed in France); its output of war material increased 300 per cent; its shipping increased from 2,000,000 to 6,000,000 tons; IT SPENT $33,000,000,000 (NEARLY $3,000,000 AN HOUR)."

How useful to France were these dollars that we borrowed from our people and advanced to the French Government against their solemn promise to repay? This is what Tardieu says:

> "Without means of payment in dollars—and since November, 1916, such means of payment had been lacking—the Allies would have been beaten before the end of 1917. America's entry into the war saved them. Before the American soldier, American dollar turned the tide."

Would they have done as much for us? Tardieu himself says NO (page 127):

> "In our heart of hearts we often ask ourselves whether, had the roles been reversed, had France been neutral and the United States invaded, we should have done as much for them as they were doing for us."

What are the words in the English or the French language to characterize the man who does not want his land to pay this debt, even after we have scaled it down to 50 cents on the dollar?

Next year France will be getting from Germany, as war reparations, 52 per cent of the German annual payment of $625,000,000. That is, France will be getting from Germany $325,000,000 a year. Tardieu says that no French Parliament would ratify the Berenger-Mellon agreement, which obligates France to pay us $30,000,000 a year, in the early years of the agreement.

That is, Tardieu says that it is impossible to consider giving us even one-tenth of the war indemnity collected from Germany, though he admits that without our help, Germany would now be collecting indemnity from France.

It is hoped that these incidents are teaching our people determination to keep out of foreign wars that are none of our business.

If America is really learning this lesson, the price has not been too high.

It's A Different Italy Since Duce Took Hold

Whatever divergence of opinion there may be as to the methods of Mussolini, everybody is agreed that he gets results. It is a different Italy since he took hold.

Last week Paderewski, the great pianist and former premier of Poland, landed in San Francisco from Australia and answered reporters' questions. This is what he said of Italy:

> "I read with much interest, too, of Mussolini. I admire him tremendously. There is a man who is accomplishing things. To me he is by far the greatest statesman of today. We must not criticize his methods, but must remember that a statesman must guide his acts according to the fruit he wishes to harvest.
> "I have seen Italy before and during the Mussolini regime. The difference is tremendous. Before, I saw dirty streets, thronged with beggars, and disorders and chaos were apparent everywhere. After Mussolini stepped in, I saw Italy again. Streets, railways, even automobiles, were spotless. And even in Naples, famous for its beggars, I saw only one man asking for alms."

Fat Men More Honest

"Fat men who cuss a little when occasion seems to demand are better honesty risks than thin men who are over pious," says a vice president of the National Surety Company in an address at Atlantic City. "Married men are better honesty risks than single ones and women are more honest than men."

With all their physical imperfection, fat men do create an atmosphere of honesty. A fat man's chief sin, that of carrying too much weight, is perfectly obvious, according to the dieticians and his derelictions in other directions are negligible.

Nobody blames a fat man for "cussing a little" for it must be admitted that if any person has any excuse to use a bit of mild profanity, especially in summer, he has.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up betimes and met Eddie Cantor along the avenue whistling like a schoolboy on vacation and stopped to talk to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mack, who seem to be always traveling here and there and enjoying life to the fullest measure.

For breakfast a cup of coffee, the first in four months, and found no taste for it soever. Home and Dr. C. Ihle and Dorothy there and much talk of this and that. Then to my mail, mostly bills and one bore quite a tart warning, which I heeded promptly.

In the evening to dine with Gene Crawley, Joe A. Moore and their wives and talked with Billy DeBeck, the cartoonist, who was dining with as fair a lady as ever I saw. So home to bed.

In every cafe there is a sprinkling of men who dine alone. They make a ritual of dining, carefully inspecting menus, balancing values and heeding the culinary suggestions of the waiter captains. They come freshly barbered and dressed as though attending a court function. They eat slowly, look over the crowds casually and are not at all interested in the casual flirtations of many lone diners. One sees the same men drifting from cafe to cafe nightly, month after month, and making a daily event of dinner.

We hear much of the reckless living rich. At a huge table the granddaughter of one of America's richest men was entertaining a dinner party. All were young save for an elderly gray-haired lady acting as chaperone, who was incidentally given extremely considerate attention. Three of the eight girls wore long hair and only one smoked at the table. The young men were not those wearing the correct dinner tie of the month or the one stud shirt bosom. No liquor was served nor did they essay hip shaking steps in after dinner dancing. They were first to leave.

At another table sat a man who came up from the ranks of workers to a position of power, but long ago lost sympathy with the working class in attempting to pyramid a fortune in stock manipulation. Recently his seat among the mighty has been shady. Newspapers have pilloried him. And like most weak men he was trying to escape the reality of an emotional crisis in the usual way. He was drunk.

* * *

Nothing so disturbs a cafe as a row in the kitchen. It upsets the entire morale and thus spreads to guests by the disrupted service. A cafe kitchen employe who engages in an altercation knows his job has ended—no matter what the provocation. A head waiter tells of a Frenchman who permitted another employe to slap him in the face seven times. He offered no resistance until through work. Then he waited near the employee's exit and gave his tormentor a beating that sent him to the hospital for two weeks.

It wouldn't surprise many to see a magic lantern show click on Broadway. This summer one of those shadowgraph artists packed a pop-eyed crowd nightly in a store room by reflecting animal shadows on a curtain with his hands.

And a street hawker on Tenth avenue sells crowns to slip over teeth at 10 cents a crown. There's gold in them mountings!

* * *

The other evening at a club arose a discussion of a man who has always been poor but popular. In the last few years he has been deservedly and extraordinarily successful. The discussion had a critical tone—tinged with a slight venom. There is, after all, a blessing in failure. There is no jealousy.

Telegram from some apparently irritated reader reads: "Who launders your space?" This has been referred to the manager of our Go Jump in the Lake Department.

Right Kind of Patriotism

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A patriotic deed is one which reflects honor and glory upon one's country.

We recognize Gen. Grant, the Duke of Wellington and Napoleon as patriots because they led armed forces of their respective countries.

The exploits of Col. Lindbergh, together with that of Chamberlin and Levine, have glorified the United States. But this glory was not offset by any rancor incurred by other countries. France and Germany were just as enthusiastic in acclaiming the exploits of our fliers as we were. This is the right kind of patriotism and patriotic action, for it is one which exalts one's native country and at the same times does not awaken animosity in other peoples.

Undoubtedly Thomas Edison has glorified his own country quite as much as Gen. Grant. On a vote taken in France recently the most popular Frenchman was found to be not Napoleon, but Louis Pasteur.

So Darwin and Jenner have done more to exalt the prestige of England than Drake and Wellington.

Koch and Goethe have spread the fame of Germany far more than Von Moltke and Ludenburg, and Marconi and Bellanca have made Italy famous and are entitled to the gratitude of their country quite as much as Garibaldi.

Tolstoy has done more to spread the renown of Russia than all her warriors.

This throws a welcome light upon true patriotism, which is found in that harmless rivalry for achievement by the members of the various national groups.

There is no bad blood in this competition. There is nothing gained for one country which is not equally valuable for the whole world.

We are learning that to be a good national is to be a good world citizen, and the applause of mankind is quite as valuable as the applause of one's fellow citizens.

In order to elevate our country and to magnify it, it is no longer necessary to go out and kill somebody or annex some other territory; it is better to do something that shall excite both the emulation and the applause of the whole world.

True patriotism consists in making our country stronger and better and not necessarily belittling another country.

More Truth Than Poetry

by S. E. Kiser

Dumb and Proud of It

THE dumbest man I ever met
Outside a place for feeble minds
Had not become bald-headed yet
Nor suffered ills of many kinds.
He told me he had gone to school;
The clothes he wore were not so bad;
He seemed to like to play the fool,
And air the ignorance he had.

HE thought that Indians ran wild
All over India still;
I mentioned Pike's Peak, and he smiled,
And said: "That must be quite some hill."
I spoke about Yosemite,
Advising him to journey there;
He scratched his head and looked at me,
And then asked what it was and where.

HE thought that Texas was a place
Where nothing was produced but "erl;"
Manhattan, with a sober face,
He mentioned as his "native serl;"
He never had been farther West,
He told me, than Tenth avenue;
There was no longing in his breast
To rove as care-free gypsies do.

HE seemed to take a silly pride
In being dense and unconcerned.
He carelessly had turned aside
From useful things he might have learned.
"New Yawk" was all he cared to know,
The world outside was full of hicks;
I presently discovered, though,
That he was lately from "the sticks."

Tales that are Told

The Obstacle

HOWARD HEINZ said in a recent interview that the world leadership held by American business is, in his opinion, due in great part to American business ethics.

"The lie has been taken out of business," he said in a second interview. "The old story about George Washington wouldn't have much point today.

"'Children,' a village schoolmam said one morning many years ago—'children, with labor and perseverance you will conquer every obstacle. Do you remember my telling you of the terrific obstacle George Washington was up against!'

"'Yes, ma'am,' the children chorused.

"'What was Washington's great obstacle, children?'

"'He couldn't tell a lie!'"

A Nasty Feeling

SENATOR KAY PITSMAN, apropos of the international tariff conference in Stockholm, said at a Tonopah banquet:

"Tariff barriers, when they're too high, create a nasty feeling between nations. France and Italy are putting up higher and higher tariff barriers all the time, and the result is that their relations are getting like—well, like those of the two movie stars.

"These two movie stars quarreled all the afternoon at a Hollywood tea. Finally, as the sun went down, one of them said in a very loud voice:

"'Dearest, let's stop quarreling. I never knew who my mother was—she deserted me on a banker's doorstep—and perhaps, darling, perhaps you are she!'"

On the Critics

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT attended a Tuscon reception not long since and inspected, with half a dozen other guests, his host's library.

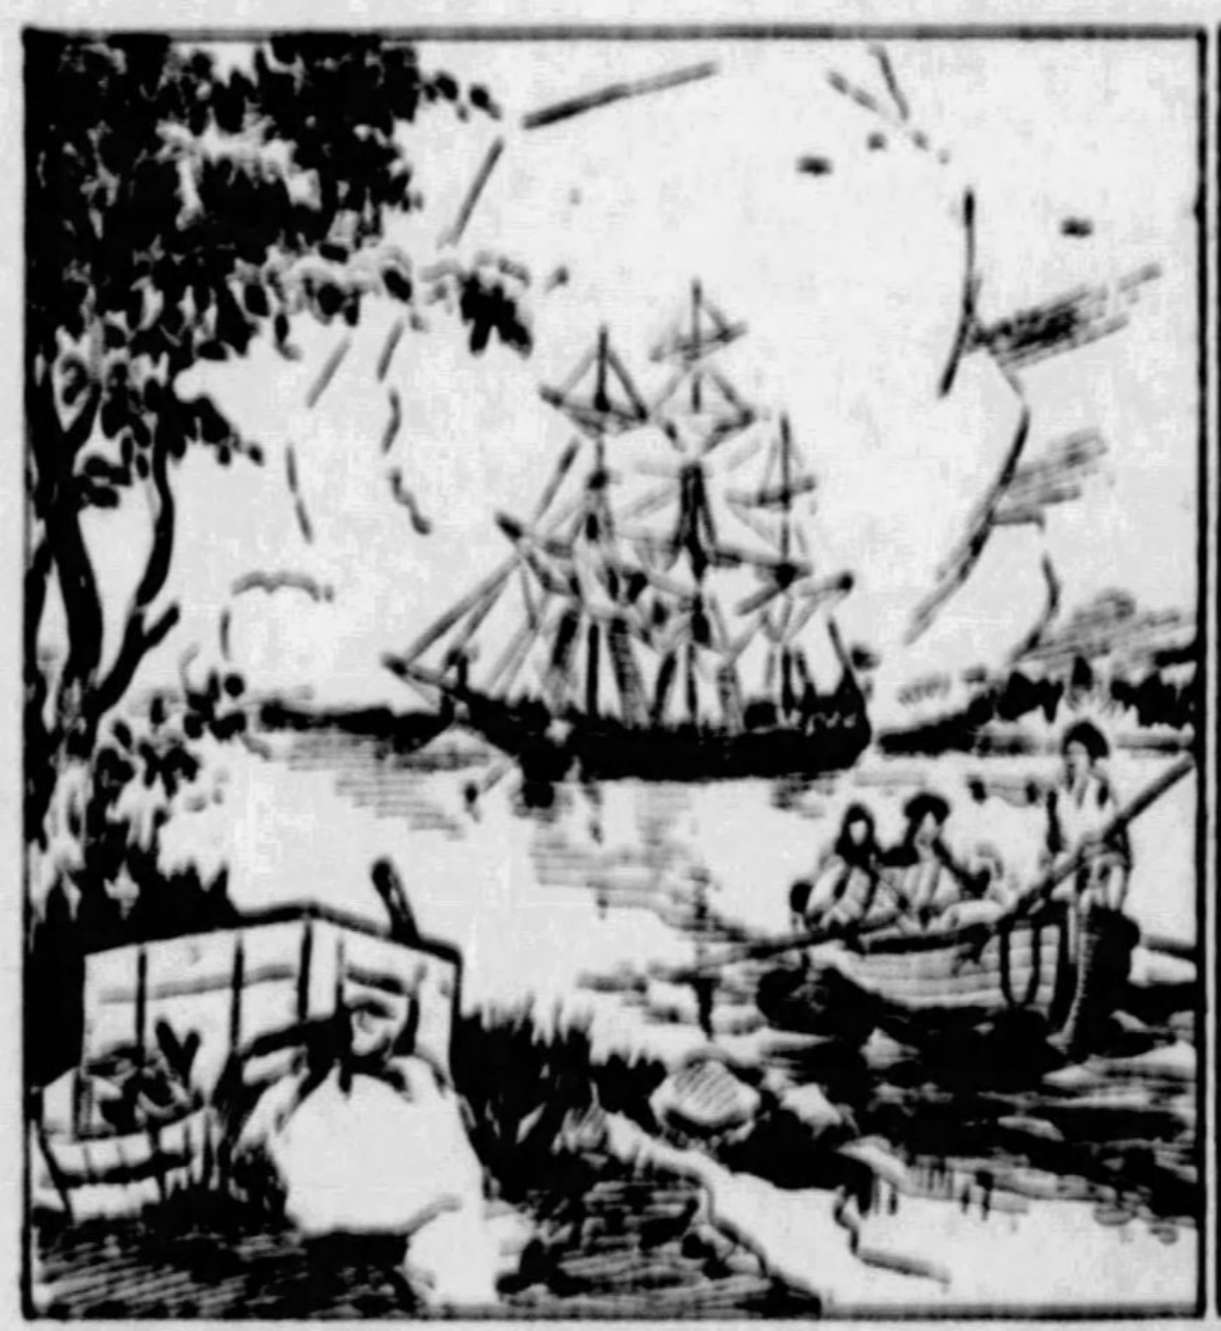
It was a large and splendid library; all the books were deluxe editions; and all the pages were uncut. This discovery caused a good deal of mocking laughter, but Mr. Wright held up his hand and said:

"Hold on, friends. Don't blame our host. For all we know, he may be a critic."

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



IN tracing the ancestry of THOMAS ALVA EDISON, we must go back to Holland. The original Edisons were important millers on the Zuyder Zee. The first members of the family to come to America landed at Elizabethport, N. J., and settled near Caldwell, N. J., the birthplace of President Grover Cleveland.

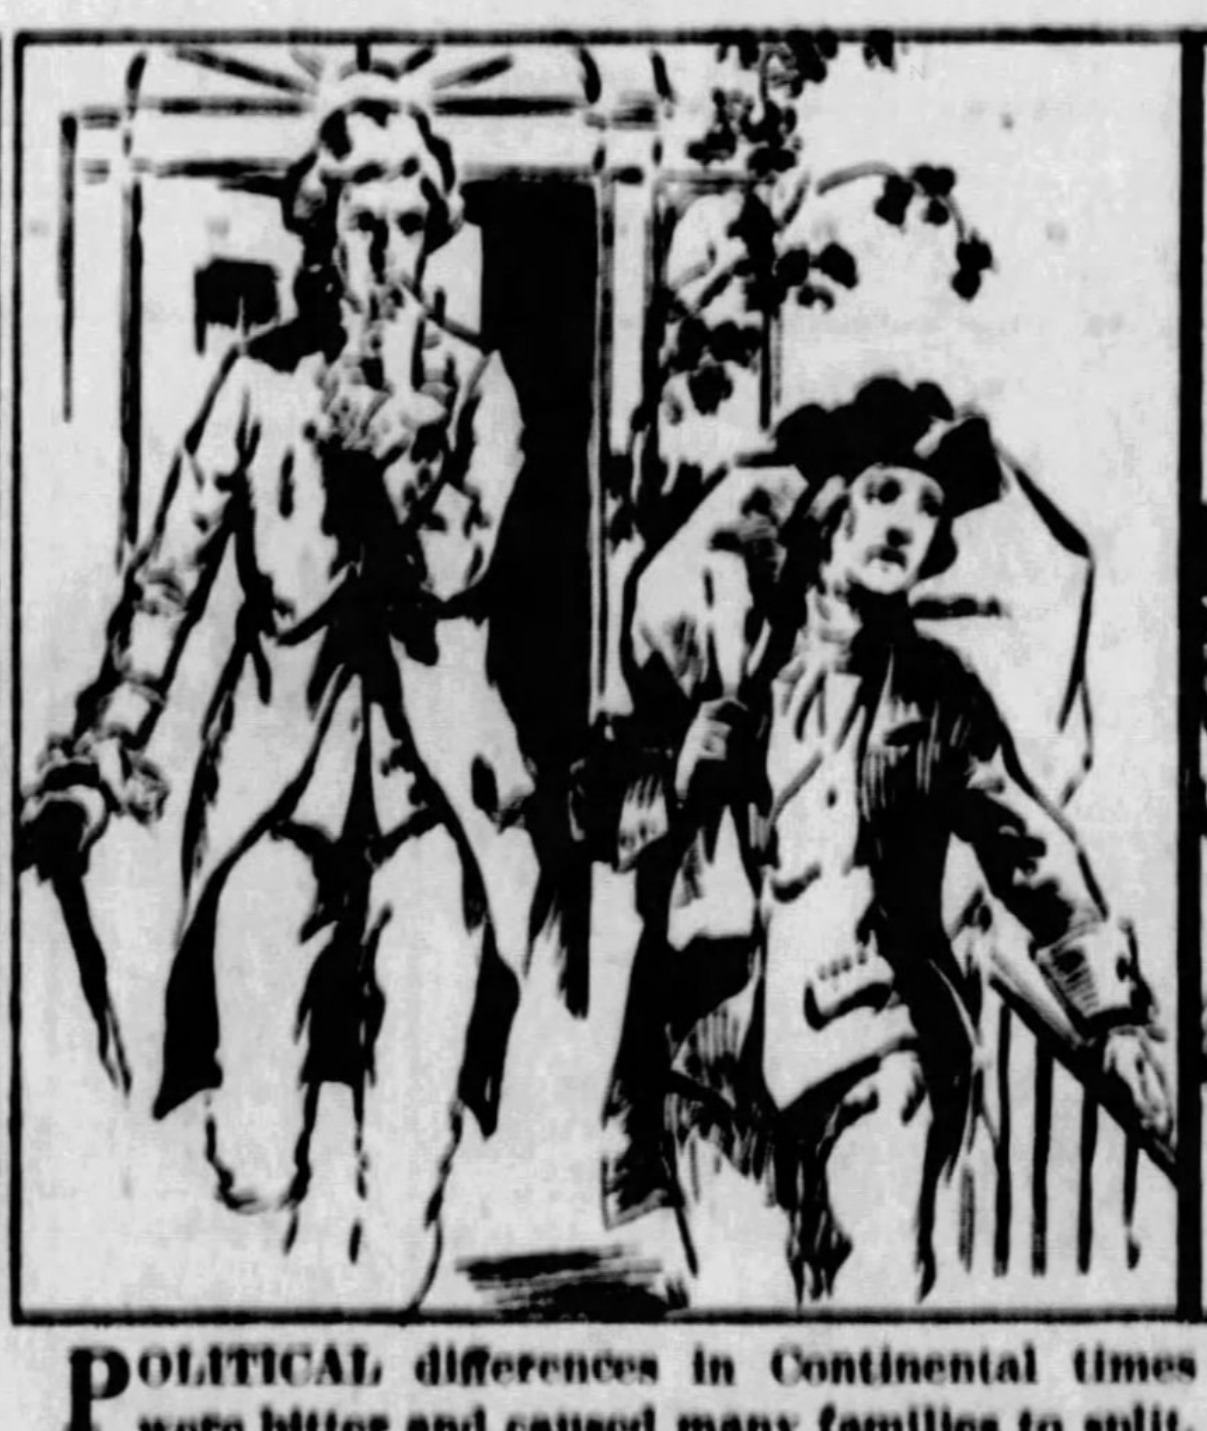
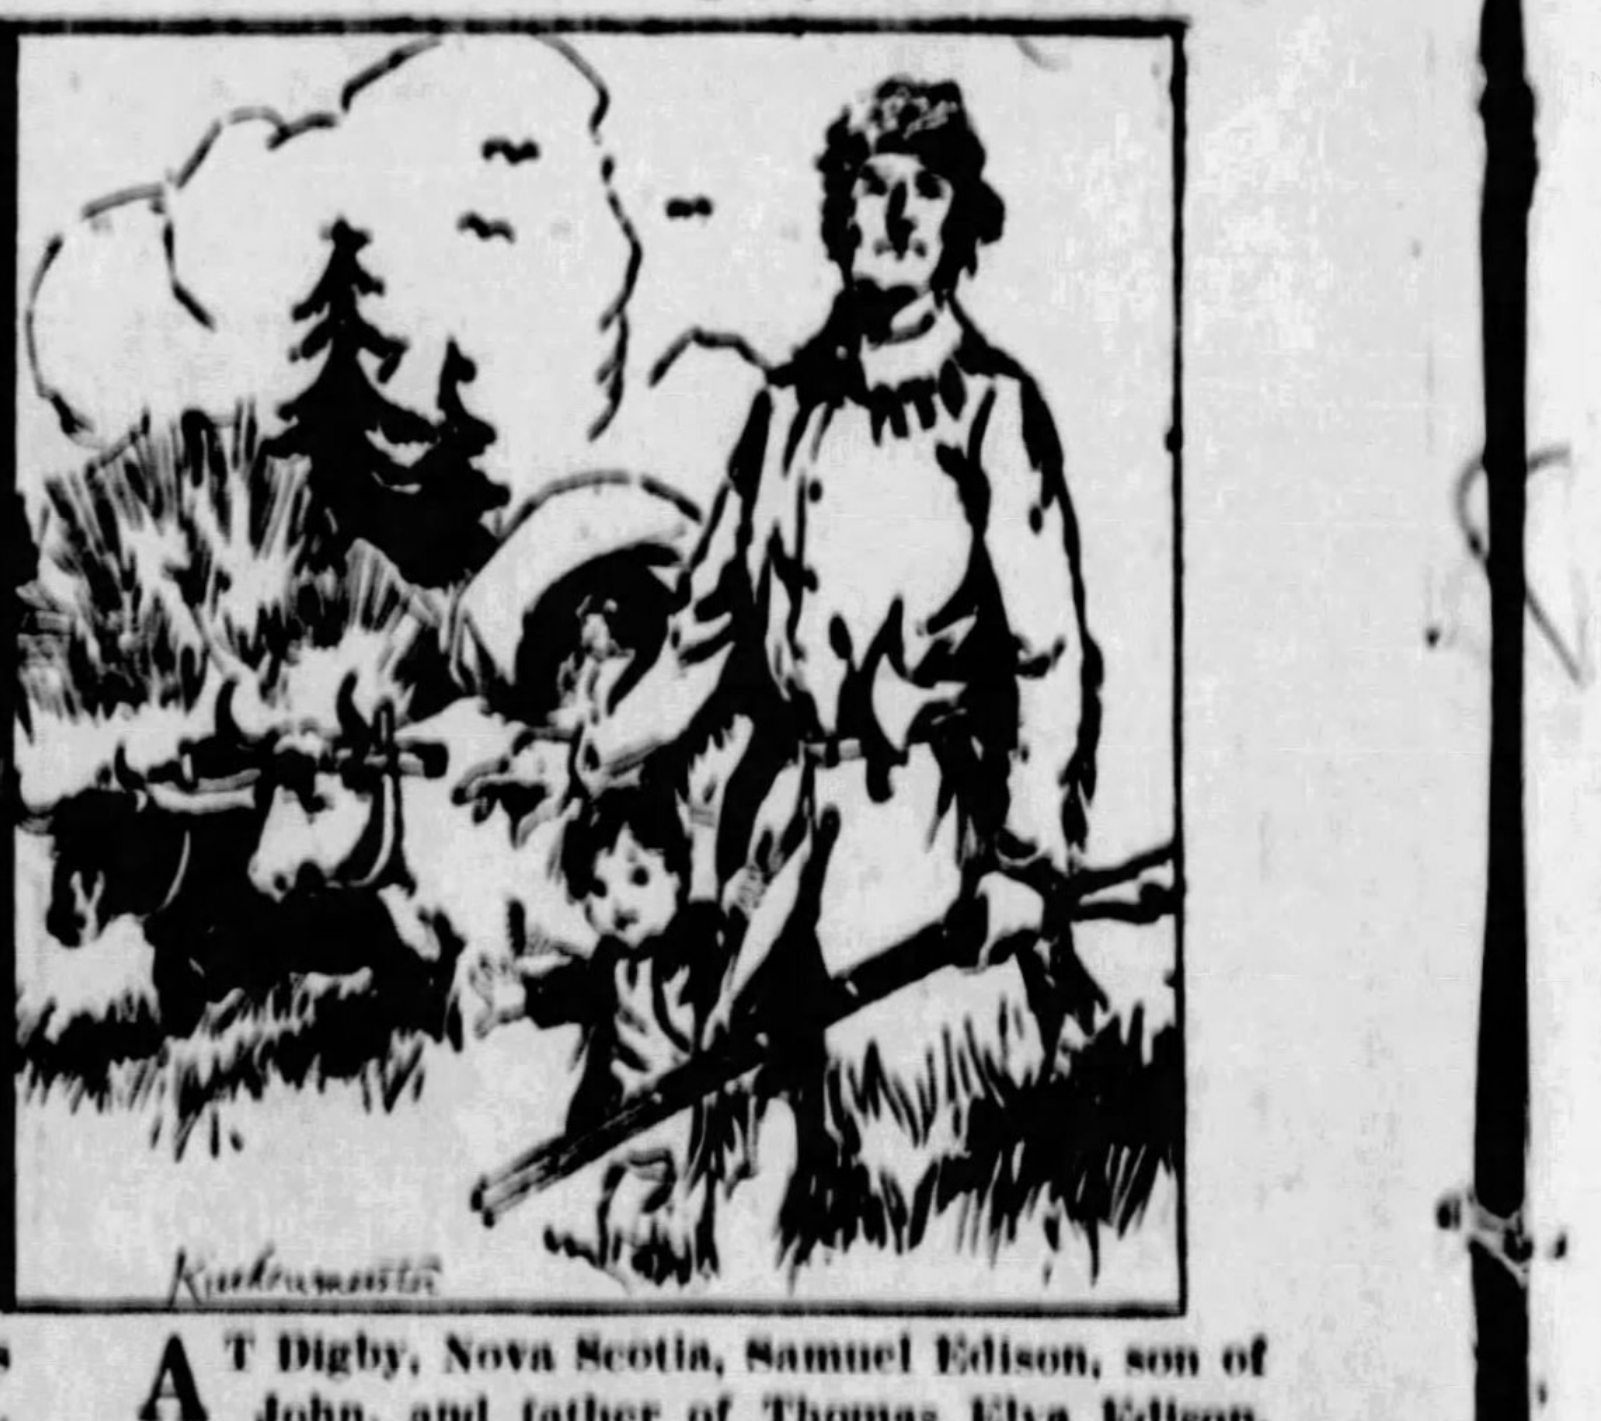
THE next definite record we have of the Edison family in America is of Thomas Edison, great-grandfather of Thomas A., who became a bank official on Manhattan Island and signed Continental currency in 1778. This sturdy pioneer reached the age of 104 years, an instance of the longevity which prevails in the Edison family.



POLITICAL differences in Continental times were bitter and caused many families to split. Such was the case with the first Thomas Edison and his son John. As with many other Americans, the son differed violently from his staunchly Continental father and joined the loyalist migration to Nova Scotia after the Revolution.



AT Digby, Nova Scotia, Samuel Edison, son of John, and father of Thomas Elva Edison, was born in 1804. When Samuel was seven years old, his father became entitled under Canadian laws to a grant of six hundred acres. By means of ox wagons the family moved to the township of Bayfield on Lake Huron. (Continued tomorrow)
